Repeat Business

We're not one of the changes our clients make.

Strip away all the highfalutin, business model doublespeak, buzz phrase du jour language of Customer Relations Management, and it comes down to — the customer is king. Respect their opinions. Honor their requests. Charge them fairly and put your heart and soul into satisfying them. If you do, they tell their friends, and those friends tell theirs, and before you know it you're James V. Zizzi and you've built over 250 magnificent custom homes on the East End — for some of the area's most discerning clients. More importantly, you've built second and third homes for them. And have even gone on to build homes for their children.

Some builders look at a home they've built and see nothing more. James V. Zizzi looks at his homes and sees so much more. Perhaps because he's building a following

The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Columbus Day Extravaganza

Guaranteed LOWEST Down Prices in THE COUNTRY

(CATALOGS, CHAINS, DISCOUNTERS WE BEAT THEM ALL)

PHONE ORDER DEPARTMENT
1(888) 414 - DOWN

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

"We go the distance for you."

Danhampton

A Proposal For A Tiny New Village In The Hamptons For The Editor

By Dan Rattiner

I am fed up with the Town of East Hampton. I am sick and tired of the Town of Southampton. And so I have decided to do something that has never been done before — create a new village called Danhampton, consisting of my half acre in East Hampton with my house on it, where I live, and my full-acre in Bridgehampton with my office building on it, where I work at Dan's Papers. This is the first time in history that a village will be created which is not only non-contiguous — like Pakistan — so you can't go into one part of the village, without going out of one part and into the other — but which is located in two different townships. I will apply for an entry to the Guinness Book of World Records.

My complaints with the Towns of East Hampton and Southampton are many. In East Hampton, if I want to get a building permit, I have to make an application and wait, sometimes for nearly two hours, to get it. I want to start my building improvement right away.

In Southampton, sometimes we work late, into the early morning in fact, to get the paper out, and the lights sometimes shine into the houses of the neighbors, who complain. The police are sent down.

They've got noise ordinances in both Southampton and East Hampton. We like to make a lot of noise. In the Village of Danhampton we will have a noise ordinance that says you can make all the noise you want, and it's just too bad for everybody else. Our building application procedure will be a rubber stamp reading JUST BUILD IT. GOOD LUCK. Make an application and we will send you the rubber stamp. Fed Ex overnight.

In Danhampton, we will allow my special helicopter to land any damn place it wants.

Obviously, we will not be able to build a road connecting the eastern half of Danhampton to the western half because it will mean getting approvals from the two Towns. You have no idea how much paperwork is involved in getting these approvals. It's so much paperwork that nobody has ever been able to complete any of it. No new connector roads have been built in either of these towns for more than thirty years.

Instead, we will connect the two parts of Danhampton by helicopter service. Landing a helicopter anywhere in East Hampton or Southampton is completely illegal unless it is at an airport. In Danhampton, we will allow my special helicopter to land any damn place it wants.

To get my Village approved, my lawyer tells me the people who live in my village — me — have to have a referendum on the matter, at which time everybody in my proposed village will have the opportunity to vote either for it or against it. This is a bore and a bother as far as I can see. I am the only resident, and I have spoken. The vote is 1 to 0. Get it? Okay, we'll have a referendum.

As for getting a referendum, my lawyer tells me that I have to submit information to the

Hampton

Towns of Southampton and East Hampton stating that more than 500 people live in the part of town that is soon to be Danhampton. I say this is no problem. A group of oceanfront residents, who want to have a referendum to form the Village of Dunehampton in Southampton Town, recently submitted a list showing more than 500 people living in the proposed community, some of whom are dead, residents of somewhere else, friends and guests.

I have already created a list of more than 500 people who live in Danhampton who meet those qualifications. I have the names of the dead people from the title search that was done when I bought these two properties thirty years ago. And I have names of not only friends and guests and residents of somewhere else, but of customers, employees, repairmen and cleaning ladies who have at one time or another been in the future Danhampton and are therefore entitled to resident status. My list has over 5,000 names. This is not a problem.

Once I form Danhampton, I am going to have very strict rules about who is or is not allowed to be on the premises. In the western part of Danhampton, I will only allow people in who are customers or employees. Customers will have to meet the definition of "customer" or be asked to leave. The definition will be that they spend at least $10,000 advertising in the paper every week.

As for employees, we will require that they carry personal photo identification onto the property so we may issue them "work permits" or Dan Cards. Applying for a Dan Card will require a $5,000 application fee. And then there is an initiation fee which I cannot tell you about because it is a private matter.

As for the eastern half of Danhampton, ordinances will include a dress code — no walking around in your underwear in the living room — and something completely unique — a food code. Anyone visiting the eastern half of Danhampton must bring food. Something good. There will also be a gatehouse at the entrance of the eastern half of Danhampton which will be staffed 24 hours a day 7 days a week. Nobody will be allowed in without the approval of the majority of the residents of Danhampton, by vote, at the time the entry is requested. Visitors may give the gatehouse officers money. If it is enough, we will bend the rule.

Danhampton revenues will come from a visitors tax, a parking tax, a real estate tax, a bathroom tax (rates by the minute) and a desirability tax. People whom the residents determine have a low desirability will pay the higher tax. Also, anyone talking about a real estate killing will have to pay a 10% tax, which will be equal to whatever the amount is they are talking about. We will have a permit department. You will need a permit to talk about anything. And we will have an environmental department. You will need a permit if you want permission to discuss the environment.

Tall hedgerows will be built around both the eastern and western halves of Danhampton so nobody can see in. There will be a height restriction. The hedgerows may not be less than nine feet high.

There will also be a building-height restriction. No building may be built that is not higher than every other building within five miles in any direction. And we will have a no-fly zone. Aircraft may not fly over Danhampton and if they do the penalties will be $10,000 an incident. And birds will be permitted to fly over Danhampton, but they will be expected to pick up after themselves if they poop and deposit their baggied "droppings" in a special container that we will have at all entrances to Danhampton. Danhampton will also be — taking a tip from New Zealand — a Nuclear Free Zone.

Danhampton will have an annual fundraiser. All the elected officials, or official, will be honored at the fundraiser, and we will have either the Rolling Stones or Barbra Streisand entertaining. Master of Ceremonies will be Robin Williams. Watch for the date.

We expect to have two public buildings for the residents of the Village of Danhampton. Village Hall will be the office building in Bridgehamptonß and it will share the space with Dan's Papers. The Police Station will be what is now the two car garage next to the house in East Hampton. We expect to get a lot of Federal funds to improve these structures, since we fully intend to follow all federal guidelines involving handicapped access, non-discrimination, Regents Exams, and frequent checks to see we are properly displaying all federal posters.

My lawyer tells me that there may be one loophole that might stymie this entire project. And that is, if there is only one voting resident in

The Inventor

Thomas Edison's Three Known Journeys Out To The East End

By Dan Rattiner

Many famous people have been in the Hamptons. Teddy Roosevelt was here, Albert Einstein spent summer vacations here — in Nassau Point — Jackson Pollock and Willem de Kooning lived in Springs, John Steinbeck in Sag Harbor.

Until recently, however, I never had any reason to think that Thomas Edison came here. He's not in the regular history books about this place. He and his inventions of the electric light, the phonograph and the talking moving picture have always been associated with his laboratories in New Jersey. He built labs in West Orange, in Menlo Park. The whole town of Edison is named after him.

Now it turns out that Thomas Edison was in the Hamptons on numerous occasions, on each occasion fiddling with some idea he had, or seeing someone else's new invention for himself, traveling around to places such as Quogue, Riverhead and Sag Harbor. It's quite a story.

By 1888, which is the first time Edison seems to have come out here — on the railroad — most of his great inventing successes were behind him. He was 41 years old at the time, and already famous for the electric light bulb, the phonograph, the automatic telegraph machine and the Wall Street Stock Ticker. Five years before he came out here, backed by money from the Vanderbilts and J. P. Morgan, Edison had built and successfully run this country's first central power station. New York City could turn on lights with a flick of the switch.

The fact is that by 1888, Edison was so famous he could do practically anything he wanted, as an inventor. He was a free spirit. He would travel someplace, get an idea, and then return to Menlo Park and the laboratories to have some of his technicians try to put the idea into effect.

> "There ain't no rules around here," he said. "We're trying to accomplish something."

Once, at the lab, a new employee asked him about rules. "There ain't no rules around here," he said. "We're trying to accomplish something."

There was railroad service to Riverhead and Southampton by that time. Somebody told Edison about something he had seen on a beach in Quogue. Edison went out to look at it.

"What I heard one day was that there were these immense deposits of black magnetic sand down in Quogue, Long Island," Edison wrote in a memoir later. "My first thought was that it would be a very easy matter to concentrate this, and I thought I could sell the stuff at a good price. I'd put up a plant."

Edison came out on the train and went by horse-drawn wagon down to the beach. There he saw miles and miles of black sand — iron ore — as a thin layer atop the regular white sand he was familiar with. He envisioned a small wooden factory on pilings, right there on the beach. The iron ore could be swept into a pile under the pilings where paddle wheels could lift it up and machines could load it into barrels. Then the sea would wash in more of the stuff.

Edison made some drawings of the factory and hired a local crew to build it on the beach. Then he returned to New Jersey. Two weeks later, he was back to supervise the first day of work. The black sand was accumulated under the plant. Then disaster struck.

"I put up this small plant," he wrote, "but just as I got it started, a tremendous storm came up and every bit of the black sand went out to sea."

Edison

And that was that. The black iron-rich sand comes in, and it goes out. It still does that today.

People say that as recently as the 1950s, the remains of the factory were visible there on the beach at low tide.

The next time Thomas Edison ventured out to the East End was 1914. According to the U. S. Patent Office, Edison applied for, and received, patents for more than 1,000 devices and inventions. At age 67, he was still at it. And he thought he had a way to make moving pictures talk. He would try it at a theatre in Riverhead. That showing, a one time only event, is well-documented as "The Eighth Wonder of the World — Thomas Edison's Talking Pictures." Reviews of the event appeared in many local newspapers here at the time.

The theatre where he tried this has a remarkable history in itself. It was built in 1881, just two years after Edison had invented the electric light in his lab in New Jersey. And though it was originally lighted by gas lamps and candles, there is a reference in a program from the opening — it was a performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" — to something quite remarkable in the lobby, which was called "Edison's Electric Parlor Lamp." Since there was no electric light or even electricity on eastern Long Island at the time, it is believed this light was powered by an electrical battery, another of Edison's inventions. Thomas Edison himself did not attend this event.

The Music Hall in Riverhead — a long restoration of it was completed earlier this year on Peconic Avenue — was originally built by a Riverhead lumber dealer named David F. Vail. Vail tried to put a little spice in his working life. He not only built the Music Hall, which was a success, but he also bought a decommissioned, U. S. Navy sail-powered battleship known as the "Ohio." He arranged to have it towed to Greenport, where he hoped to exhibit it to tourists. But under tow in Long Island Sound, it sprung a leak and sank. So that was the end of that.

There are some wonderful stories about performances held at the Music Hall. For the performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for example, the good people of Riverhead decided to change it around a bit from the original written by Harriet Beecher Stowe. On stage at the same time, they would have two of everything. This had never been done before. There would be two Little Evas, two Simon Legrees with horsewhips, two Elizas with two babies in arms, even two horses and two bloodhounds. One shudders to think how this might have looked.

Four years later, there is a reference to "literary and vocal entertainment" to benefit the Quogue Church Society. Many people from Quogue came to see the performances in the wondrous 400-seat theatre, making the two-hour journey in horse-drawn wagons over a rutted road. Then, a week later, the Riverhead Harmonic Society gave a benefit at the Music Hall "for repairing the road to Quogue."

It might give you an idea of what the times were like back then.

Edison's experiment with talking pictures took place in Riverhead because of his friendship with a Brooklyn showman named Franklin P. McCutcheon, who had rented the theatre for the summer from the building owner. Earlier that year, Edison had perfected a wire recording device that could play what was recorded. And so, using his new machine, he had recorded the filming of a silent movie, coincidentally also "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and tried to synchronize the silent film with the recording. It worked, and there were raves in the newspapers about this effort, and people said they would never forget it, although in truth it did not quite synchronize exactly.

NOT TO BE COMBINED

La La Land

Bankrobbers, Indians, Gourmet Terrorism, George Clooney, Rite-Aid And Recalls

By Dan Rattiner

This article is going to be a kind of rambling piece about California, a state I visited last week. My daughter, an East Hampton High School and Sarah Lawrence graduate, lives there. I hadn't seen her in about six months.

First of all, on a personal note, there was the matter of my hat. I wear a hat, practically all the time. So I came out on the plane, drove to her house, set the hat down, petted her dogs, hugged her, turned around and there was my straw hat, shredded into confetti by one of her mutts. He wagged his tail and looked at me happily. My hat was still in his mouth.

I learned a lot about myself and my hat. This is the first time in almost twenty years that I could not just shrug and go get another of the many hats I have lying around the house. Until we could go buy me a new hat, which wouldn't be possible until the next day, I would have to make do. Or go hatless. I could not go hatless. I put this shredded mess on my head.

"No, I cannot go without my hat," I told my daughter.

Here's the truth about my hat. Nineteen years ago, I had a very serious case of skin cancer. It was possible I would not live very long. Stay out of the sun, the doctor who did surgery on me said. I took him seriously. I put on a hat and vowed I would have it on my head whenever I went out doors.

> "I cannot imagine Schwarzenegger and his Hummer here...I could imagine Gary Coleman."

Two things. The hats wear out and a new one gets put on my head the same way relay race runners pass a baton. It is a seamless business. But if I always wear a hat out of doors, I have to always know where my hat is in the event I will go outdoors. I quickly learned that the best place to keep it indoors is on my head. Or under a chair when I eat, or alongside the bed when I sleep. Now, for the first time, there was a big problem. This was my only hat.

"What would happen if you don't wear your hat?" my daughter asked.

"I would get very fidgety," I said. "I'd be constantly looking for it." I patted the mess on my head. "This one will do just fine for now." The next day, in Old Sacramento, I got a new hat in a hat store.

We had driven from her home in San Francisco to Sacramento to visit relatives. It was just after sunset, and the state house, a ninteenth century building with a magnificent dome about eight stories high, loomed above. This capitol building is as formal and as grand as the capitol in Washington.

"I cannot imagine Arnold Schwarzenegger and his Hummer here," I said. "I could imagine Gary Coleman."

"They're ready for Larry Flynt," my daughter said. "It's wheelchair accessible."

The truth is everybody is very embarrassed about this recall vote. You will know who won by the time you read this. At the time I wrote it, we were days before the vote.

"Did they show the debate all around the country?" my daughter asked. The debate, on October 3, had been like a circus. "They keep showing it over and over, here."

I will say this. If Schwarzenegger wins, he may well be the first man with Sex Offender status to be elected a Governor.

Here are other things in the news.

In the marina district of San Francisco, police approached a man who seemed to be acting suspiciously out front of a branch of the Bank of America. "Ya got me," he said, holding his hands out so they could cuff him.

In his car, they found a book entitled "The Big Bad Book of American Bank Robbery." Down at the station house, they found that the man was clearly identifiable as the individual photographed by video cameras robbing 32 banks around the state in the last month. He was a very Wanted man. And he confessed to everything.

A Federal appeals court has cleared the way for a landless Indian tribe to take over a San Pablo cardroom as its reservation and turn it into a full-fledged one thousand slot machine casino. It would be the first full scale casino in a metropolitan area in California.

San Pablo is a city of about 30,000 people just across the bay from San Francisco. At the present time, as a card room and bingo hall on a ninety acre parcel, it has been paying an average of $3 million in profits a year to the San Pablo City Treasury. In a deal worked out by City officials with the tribe, this has been going on since 1999. The whole city budget is $12.5 million.

"We've worked very hard to make this happen," said Sharon Brown, the Mayor of San Pablo. "Crime is down, we've improved our streets, roads, parks, you name it, since we got the card room." San Pablo had partnered with the Lytton Band of Pomo Indians in the effort to get a full-fledged casino. Federal law required that they work the matter out with the Governor of California, which would now occur because of the judge clearing the legal matters out of the way. The Lytton Band of Pomos are backed by Philadelphia based financiers.

But there is still opposition. Lidia Robinson, who used to have a liquor store in town and now is involved in senior citizen centers, noted that there are several casinos in the region, and said that crime would go up in San Pablo when they complete the expanded facility. "Those little old ladies are going to get their checks at the beginning of the month and go in there and the next day they're not going to have a dime."

Animal rights activists have been very active in the San Francisco area recently, setting off bombs, spray painting walls, flooding office buildings with water and videotaping a peaceful living room scene of a California family through a window, then finally mailing the tape with the words WE ARE WATCHING YOU. All because the breadwinner in this family has been involved in the production of foie gras, made from the fatty livers of geese and ducks raised in this area.

The target of the attacks are two Frenchmen, Laurent Manrique and Didier Jaubert, who together own a duck farm that supplies fresh foie gras to the better restaurants in the San Francisco area. They had planned, in addition to wholesaling to restaurants, to open a specialty shop in the town of Sonoma to sell the products

A 1991 Honda Doesn't Pass Muster At The Bridgehampton Antique Car Race

By John Capone

The next time you are going to stand for two hours listening to the combined scrape and hum of the engines of some 40-odd vintage and classic cars as they roll over plywood planks, make sure you go to bed early, I told myself at 9 a.m. this past Saturday. I stood, at that ungodly Saturday hour, on the grounds of the Bridgehampton Historical Society, the gray matter rattling around in my brain case like a busted carburetor.

I was there in a futile,. albeit in the end well-meaning, attempt to step into the shoes so sadly recently vacated by the originator of participatory journalism. I studied the course, asked along a navigator and arrived at least on time, if not bright-eyed and eager. Such are the pratfalls of the participatory journalist. Surely Plimpton had endured worse in his stint with the Detroit Lions or as a punching bag for Archie Moore. So, as I said, there I was ready to throw my hand and tires in with sports car drivers, some of them with something bordering on professionalism. Imagine my surprise, then, when I discovered that my 1991 Honda CRX did not qualify as a classic car. "Is this not a classic car?" I asked.

"No." Flatly.

"But they don't make these anymore," I argued to no avail. I've never been able to properly explain myself in this climate. That was it, then. With no entry into the race we would just have to cover it from the press area. Such a seasoned group of hardened race fans I've not seen since the Mint 400 motorcycle race in Vegas. Granted, many of these race fans were 12-year-old boys with their fathers, marveling at the antique cars on display. Maybe not quite so hard-bitten, but they were seasoned nonetheless. They seemed to have an encyclopedic knowledge of vintage and classic automobiles. Some kids reserve this space in their brains for baseball statistics, the names of creatures in Star Wars, Playstation codes or the measurements of supermodels. For these kids, it was used for every make and model of car to come out of at least six different countries over the past sixty years.

"It must have been the dents," I complained to my co-pilot-to-be, who had turned away from me and was already wandering down Main Street in search of libations to squelch his own busted-clutch-hangover-induced migraine. "Look at this dent," I cried to him.

Just this week I had repairs done in preparation for the grueling 100-mile course through the East End. Before yesterday, my car only mostly stopped when I stepped on the brakes. A new set of brakes and hoses, one tire, and four hundred dollars later I find out that all of a sudden '91 Hondas are not classic enough. At least now I come to complete stops. The closest I've come to working on my car came the day before, when my friend and I gazed down into the open hood, and he pointed out to me that the brake fluid was empty.

"See this here?" he asked.

"The big black thing?"

"No, that's the engine. Above that, here. This plastic thing. That's where the brake fluid goes, I think."

"You think?"

"Well, I'm not quite sure," he said, emptying a bottle of brake fluid into it.

Back to the dents, though. Some clod in a van the size of a military transport vehicle backed into my parked car at Cooper's Beach in July, thereby rendering it mint-no-longer. The remarkable thing was that he wasn't so sure he had caused the crumpled dent that his rear bumper was resting in. I had returned to my car moments earlier to see the driver of the van putting a note on my windshield. We stood there next to the mangled rear quarter panel, and I looked at the note in my hand. "Had a minor bump," it began, "Call if there is any damage." I looked at him and then the note again and then the back of my car. "Any damage?" I asked incredulously, "Any damage?" Then I looked again to the car to see if my eyes deceived me, hoping that they had.

As I walked the field admiring the real classic cars, I imagined that the horror I felt that morning would be magnified ten-fold if one of these machines were ever involved in a similar scrape. At the very least, I could gather some hints from the drivers and owners here in Bridgehampton so I'd know what to do when the time came to restore my own classic. Would I really have to wait forty-three years until my Honda qualified for this event? Who knows, they might not even be running it anymore. It's a matter of amazement to even the participants themselves, I think, that the revival of the Rallye has made it into its eleventh year.

When the lineup began, the crowd gathered (as they so often do) along the perimeter to cheer each car and driver as they came to the starting line. Each driver was ably interviewed by master of ceremonies Jim Donick, who himself drove away in the number 38 car. I realized that I was linguistically unprepared for the descriptions and learned that, contrary to my prior belief, most parts of an automobile are not referred to as thingees. Also, I learned a bit of a foreign language (if you count England as foreign). Brits don't have hoods, trunks and fenders, but rather bonnets, boots and wings. I learned this because MGs were among the most popular cars, and Anglophiles are quick to point out misusages.

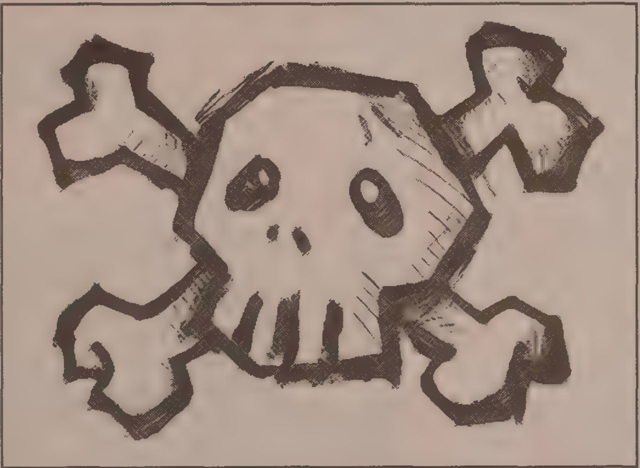
"28 Days Later"

The Movie Version of Plum Island, The Laptop and The Encephalitis Outbreak

By John Capone

Plum Island, like so many secrets, tantalizing if only because it's forbidden, provides the backdrop on which our little play unfolds. You hear that there's been an encephalitis outbreak in Montauk. A dangerous strand affecting animals called eastern equine encephalitis was recently found in mosquito pools in Camp Hero. The virus can be fatal. A news anchor on the television is somberly intoning that another laptop has been reported stolen from Plum Island, the Animal Disease Center. The anchor's lips continue to move, but now you only pick out a few words here and there. Fatalities. Evacuation. Blood. Infection. Your eyes dart back forth from the television to the curtain in your window flapping against the ocean breeze. You've seen 28 Days Later; you know what happens in the movie next. Panic. You rush to the windows and seal them with duct tape, to a rising crescendo of strings and symbols. After you've finished taping the bedroom windows and sealed the front door you lean against the wall to rest a moment. Your eye moves slowly to a slight tickle on your left wrist. The camera pans and locates the source. You hold your breath in, look down and discover — a mosquito. The music climaxes. Three staccato bursts of strings. Your scream ricochets off the duct tape-strewn walls.



The U.S. Department of Agriculture boasts on the website for the Plum Island Animal Disease Research center, "We're proud of our role as America's first line of defense against foreign animal diseases. We're equally proud of our safety record. Not once in our nearly 50 years of operation has an animal pathogen escaped from the island," a statement with a "yet" muttered under your breath at the end, just waiting to have "UNTIL NOW," scrawled under it, or worse yet, "THAT WE'LL TELL YOU ABOUT."

Formerly under the aegis of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the facility will now be under the administration of Homeland Security, which only highlights the fact that it is a military facility. Anyone who has tried to swim there from Orient Point will have the arrest record to attest to this. One idea could be to send United Nations weapons inspectors to the facility. They might uncover some of George W. Bush's weapons of mass destruction, and biological weapons programs.

You imagine yourself at Plum Island's abandoned lighthouse, climbing its crumbling stairs to get to the top, which would afford you a view of the whole island. The lighthouse, built in 1869, guided ships safely past the island's treacherous rocks until 1978, when the Fresnel lens was extinguished and the island's new tenants, the Animal Disease Center, moved in. The lighthouse, no longer maintained, alone, abandoned and falling apart, now stands in near-ruin.

You wonder what sort of bio-engineered, insect-borne viruses could have stowed away in the pilfered laptop. The officials at Plum Island tell you it's improbable, and then refer you to Homeland Security. You picture the new sheriff riding into town, or in this case, coming ashore. He's a big Texan with sandy hair, and he's here to set things right, by God, he says. The shoreline crunches under his cowboy boots and you imagine turning to him on that rocky bluff and asking, "Who stole the laptops?" In this high-security, quote-unquote, research facility, how could someone make off with something so large as a computer when something so small as a microbe could be disastrous? He looks you square in the eye; he does this deliberately, cocks his cowboy hat back and says, "Son, if you start talking like that, the terrorists win." He spits a stream of tobacco juice into the breeze, and saunters off. You wipe a drop of his brown spittle from your cheek.

Despite the fact that no human has ever been diagnosed with eastern equine encephalitis in Montauk's history (although there was an outbreak in the horse population years ago), parks are closed from dusk to 8 a.m. Bad news if you're used to surfcasting in the shadow of the Montauk Lighthouse at dusk, when the striped bass, which are nocturnal, are biting. As a matter of fact, waiting until the first, or possibly second, frost kills off all the mosquitoes, just plain sucks.

Your brain reels with the possibilities of countless conspiracies. You know that the Florida Marlins just played the San Francisco Giants of California this week in the NLCS. California is having an unusual recall-induced election, and voting machines, need I add, not unlike the ones used in Florida (of hanging chad fame) are a contentious issue in this election. Coincidence? Stay tuned. •

Danhampton, and the voting takes place ahead of time in what is now a section of East Hampton and Southampton, what happens if I vote in East Hampton and am therefore, since I am now a declared resident of East Hampton, ineligible to vote in Southampton? Or the other way around. It might be possible that one Town will approve my application for Danhampton Village but the other one — because nobody voted — won't. This imbalance between the two Towns might result in the matter going to court. And that could cost years and millions.

I've asked my lawyer to look into two other possible ways to accomplish my goals. Forming a new church. Or forming a new nation. He said he'll get back to me. •

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #269

"Yo..Ho..Yo..Ho..a pirate's life for me..."

The three most beautiful signs of autumn are when the leaves begin to turn color, the first Holiday catalogs have arrived, and the HMS Bounty announces the schedule for its annual Haunted Ship! Anyone who went last year knows it is a haunt and a half for all ages. The minute I stepped aboard, I got in touch with my "inner wench."

I think anyone who lives on the East End has an innate affinity for tall ships.

My great grandmother, Marie Antoinette "Nettie" Gillingham and her sisters Ellie and Susie owned and operated Weeks Tavern, AKA "Bullshead Tavern," in Bridgehampton in the early 1900s. Only a plaque and a beverage store remain on the corner of Montauk Highway and Sag Harbor Turnpike.

My grandfather recalled that as a boy he worked in the Tavern and loved to go and meet the ships as they docked. The captains would stay at Weeks and bring their ship's identifying flag, which my grandfather hoisted up a pole in front of the Tavern. This allowed everyone in town to know where the ships' captains were and, in a time before phones, that was very important. My grandfather helped serve breakfast at the long tables in the mornings and made a penny a shoe shine cleaning their shoes and boots in the evening. He told us grandkids some scary sea stories that he had heard as a boy and imbued all of us with a love and respect for the sea.

To me, nothing means eastern Long Island like a tall ship. The HMS Bounty is a beauty and not to be missed by anyone with a respectable amount of salt water in their blood.

Captain Robin Walbridge, AKA Robin the Rich, and his crew, Robin's Goblins, are transforming the 412-ton, 180-foot-long square-rigger into a "Haunted Ghost Ship." The crazed sailors of the Bounty have all seen the movie "Pirates of the Caribbean" too many times this summer and have lost all sense of what is "real" versus what is "reel."

Too bad for this year's victims... them that can summon the courage to enter the ghost ship must be forewarned, as frightening things can jump out of frightening places at anytime. Some of the crew is dead, some are close to dying and some are waiting fer you....

Descend the steep aft companionway to the foggy deck below and encounter surprises as ye pass various cabins. Ye may see crew members "hanging" around while the ship's surgeon "attends" to others, misplacing a body part or two, which ye may find elsewhere below deck... Watch out for those surprise ghostly winds that may come thy way anywhere on the ship, or hatches slamming shut around ye. I don't care how old ye be, ye will know fear...just bring ye along extra heart medicine and a change of pirate pants. Be ye a wench or a jack tar, ye will pirates be after ye survive a night on this haunted ship...

This year, the Bounty is in Freeport, you can get the directions from Mapquest. Here are the details: H.M.S. Bounty's Haunted Ghost Ship Tours; from October 17-31st. Hours of operation will be 5pm to 9pm every night except Mondays. Admission is $5 for adults and children. On Sunday, October 26th, during the Freeport Fall Festival the Ghost ship will have a milder version of the Haunted Ship for young children (under the age of 10) from 12:00p.m.to 3:00p.m and then reopen at 5:00p.m. to 9:00p.m. for the adults. For more information call Margaret Ramsey, AKA Witch Wench, at 631-588-7900. Robin the Rich assures me the bodies of last year's tourists have all been cleared away.

to the public, but now, because of the attacks, the opening has been postponed two months. The store, called Sonoma Saveurs, was nearing completion when a bomb went off in front of it two nights ago, ripping stucco from an exterior wall and shattering windows. Before that, it had cement poured all over its equipment and into its drains, and was flooded with water, and before that, two weeks ago, it was spray painted with graffiti. All of these things were done during nighttime raids.

The videotape was made of the Manique family in the living room of their home in Mill Valley. In addition to everything else, Manrique is the lead chef at the popular downtown San Francisco restaurant Aqua, and there is fear that restaurant will be attacked, although that is a separate business from Sonoma Saveurs. The two Frenchmen, meanwhile, have announced that though they will continue with their plans to open their store, they are changing the store's logo. Currently it shows a smiling duck. They are also flying in a French expert to inspect how they are preparing the fois gras from their ducks, to make suggestions and give a seal of aproval.

A group called Gourmet Cruelty has taken responsibility for the attacks. They say the process in making fois gras is cruel to the ducks. Police are investigating.

And there have been more attacks. Two weeks ago, a Bay Area company called the Chiron Corporation was rocked by two explosions caused by pipe bombs. Representatives from a group called The Animal Liberation Brigade took responsibility for the attack, saying that Chiron had in the past conducted business with Huntingdon Life Science, a New Jersey firm that experimented with animals. Earlier in the week, a bomb went off at the Shaklee Company, a biotech firm that does not do experiments with animals, but is a subsidiary of Yamanouchi Consumer Inc., which reportedly does. In the past, PETA, the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, has threatened Shaklee.

Among those protesting against Huntingdon at its New Jersey headquarters in 1997 was actress Kim Basinger, who lived in Amagansett at the time.

Indeed, Edison was never able to solve that problem, and it was not until ten years later, when the recording was placed as a sound track right on the film, that filmmakers were able to produce the first talking film, "The Jazz Singer." Edison's idea, much like the one at Quogue, had not proved a commercial success. Surely, however, it contributed toward the later development of talking pictures.

Where Edison stayed during this foray out to Riverhead is not known, but it seems very likely that he was the guest at the home of one of the wealthy millionaires who came out summers to their "cottages" in Quogue, Westhampton Beach or Southampton. These people were his financial backers, after all.

Edison's last known trip to the Hamptons took place in 1921. Edison was 74 years old at this time. He stayed at the American Hotel on Main Street in Sag Harbor. And he also stayed for part of the time aboard a 140 foot long military gunboat Emblane, which was docked at Long Wharf, just a hundred yards down Main Street from the hotel.

The reason that Edison came to Sag Harbor on this occasion was to learn more about the testing of Navy Torpedoes. This unusual activity was the business of the E. W. Bliss Company, a large outfit that built torpedoes for the Navy in Brooklyn, and had them shipped out to Sag Harbor aboard railroad cars, to be tested at a smaller factory they owned just to the east of Long Wharf. If they passed the test, the torpedoes were put back on the railroad cars and returned to Brooklyn. There is no railroad to Sag Harbor today, of course, but beginning in 1882, and ending in 1939 when the tracks were torn up, a railroad line extended from the main line in Bridgehampton to Sag Harbor, where it ended right at the tip of Long Wharf. It was possible to ship goods from New York City right to the ships docked at Long Wharf, or the other way around, during this time.

The E. W. Bliss company began manufacturing torpedoes for the American Navy around 1880, and from the very beginning, Sag Harbor men tested them. They were put aboard one of two ships — the Sarah Thorpe and the Agnes in the early years, and then aboard the huge steel Emblane during the years just after World War I. The torpedoes, without explosives in them, were fired from the ships down a range in the harbor, where they were picked up by smaller boats and brought back. In the early years, the torpedoes were steam powered. Later on — and this process is apparently what attracted Edison — they were powered by compressed air. Edison stayed at the hotel a few nights, then stayed aboard the Emblane, which was lavishly equipped with accommodations for visiting dignitaries, foreign observers and military figures. Edison, surely, was wined and dined.

Thomas Edison lived to the ripe old age of 84. In his later years he developed the electric pen (!), the Kinetoscope and the mimeograph. He died on October 18, 1931, much loved in America and the world.

I have done much research to write this story. And just as I am now winding things up, I have come upon this bit of information. In 1915, Edison was appointed President of the U. S. Navy Consulting Board. He served in that capacity through America's involvement World War I (1916-18) and that is probably why he came to Sag Harbor in 1921. •

A Tribal Council on an Indian reservation outside of Redding, California, which is North of San Francisco, has expelled nine members of the Timmons family that moved onto the reservation claiming to be members of the Redding Rancheria Tribe. After some people on the reservation complained, the tribal elders held a three day enrollment hearing, concluding that through DNA evidence, birth certificates, U. S. Census documents and other testimony that members of this family are not tribal members and would have to leave the reservation, which they did.

Among the testimony was that of Betty Benner, a well-known tribal member, who said that Virginia Timmons never mentioned having a daughter, whose name had been included in the tribal entrollment. She also said that sometimes that the Timmons family members would speak in their native tongue, which was not understandable to tribal members.

The former chief operating officer for the Rite-Aid Corporation, Timothy Noonan, testified at the trial of Franklin Brown that Brown had told him a computer on which backdated letters were created to inflate benefits for executives was taken aboard a ship and dumped into the Pacific Ocean in March 2001.

Brown, the Chief Counsel for Rite-Aid, is on trial charged with conspiracy, wire fraud, obstruction of justice, witness tampering and five counts of lying to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

As a result of Brown's efforts, the prosecution says, the profits of Rite-Aid had to be lowered by $1.6 billion in July 2000.

Because my daughter lives here, I make fequent trips to San Francisco. San Franciscans march to a different drummer. Last time I was here, the citizens were objecting to the opening of a Rite-Aid Store in the North Beach district. They didn't want chain stores coming in. They bought a billboard and for a month it was painted with the sign WRONG AID. Rite-Aid abandoned their plans. •

ATTENTION: DOMESTIC PARTNERS

It is an exciting and hopeful time for lesbian and gay couples: the Supreme Court held that the criminalization of private sexual conduct between same sex partners is illegal; many local governments provide for partner registration; and DirectTV is showing gay and lesbian movies on Pay Per View.

However, New York law attempts to control the destiny of gay and lesbian relationships in times of crisis such as sickness, disability, breakup and death by assuming choices with which you may not agree and denying important rights and powers to lifetime partners in favor of biological family members or even strangers.

This is the time to ask yourself who you want to make decisions about health care, finances, property rights, and inheritance should you be unable to do so. Take control of your future by executing legal documents to formalize your decisions, making your wishes known.

BREAKING NEWS

On September 9th, the United States Department of the Interior announced that the Office of Federal Acknowledgment, part of the U.S. Department of the Interior, has received the Shinnecock petition #4 and placed it on the "Ready, Waiting for Active Consideration" list. The Director of USDI said there are a number of petitioners who are ahead of the Shinnecock petition but they will be notified when the materials come up for active consideration

On September 23rd, NY State Assemblyman Fred Thiele, an opponent of casino gambling on Long Island, praised a decision by the Federal Court that granted a preliminary injunction precluding the Shinnecocks from constructing and operating a casino. Thiele, along with Congressman Tim Bishop, State Senator Ken LaValle, and Southampton Town Supervisor Patrick Heany "reiterated their desire to discuss 'real economic' alternatives to casino gambling." Thiele says the Shinnecocks haven't responded to overtures and hopes the tribal leaders will re-consider other opportunities.

Rallye

The cars that rolled across the elevated platform set out in front of the old Bridgehampton Jail (circa 1907) each seemed to bring with them their own mystique. The cars from the twenties carried with them a certain cartoonishness, what with their awkward ambles around the grounds and squawking "eeee-aaaaw" horn blasts. The cars from the late thirties and forties, like the Packards and a '30 Buick Eight, of course, brought to mind Tommy-gun toting gangsters and rubber-faced villains out of a Dick Tracy comic.

That is not to say that when the Tour (which is both shorter than the Rallye and untimed) did not have its share of dandy gentlemen. Charles Coulter in his 1928 Chrysler Imperial could not have been more, well, imperial. Kevin and Margaret Bodkin of Sag Harbor also gave the tour a stately start when they cruised by in a 1941 Cadillac Convertible Coupe.

When all the cars had gone, I found that it is all but impossible to watch the race in any conventional sense from the grounds of the Historical Society (perhaps a slight accent on Society sometimes, but overall still a really great group). The lag between when the cars left and when they got back allowed me some time to think about everything that had happened during the day. I pondered all this in the hospitality tent over coffee: from a 1928 Packard that Charles Lindbergh once drove at 138 miles per hour, to more than one car that had competed in Bridgehampton in the fifties, and even back to the first decade of the twentieth century. One of the most refreshing things I learned, though, was modern, yet in keeping with the Historical Society's spirit of preservation. One tour car proudly displayed a Carbon Neutral sticker on its vintage windows, the idea being that you can calculate the amount of CO2 you produce through driving and other activities and take steps such as planting trees to counteract this (for more info go to www.futureforests.com). Finally I put down the coffee and headed off in search of my lost co-pilot. •

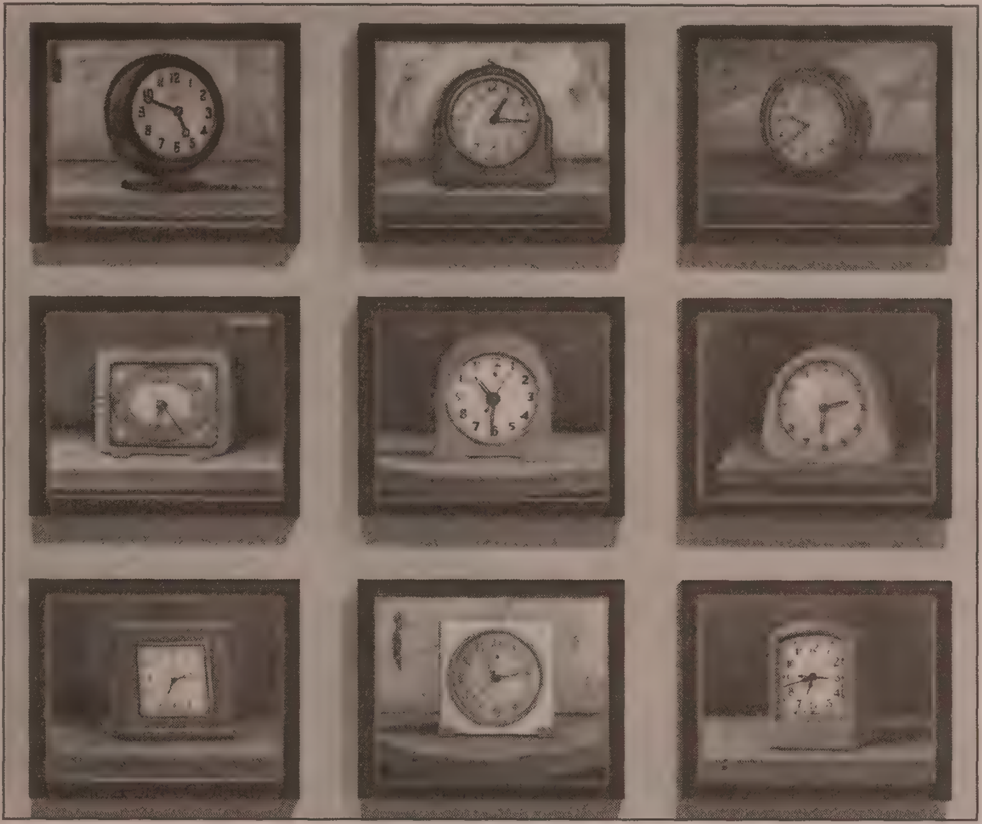
For Love, Not Money

Photographer/Icehouse Curator Hannah Gray Embraces Greenport, Dublin, And Life

By Susan Whitney Simm



Works by Scott McIntire

There are few human attributes as appealing as compassion and exuberance. And photographer Hannah Gray, curator of the recently opened Icehouse gallery in Greenport, embodies both. Ms. Gray, whose almost ethereal appearance belies an articulate and tireless passion for her work, is as committed to making her Greenport venture a success as she is to making a difference in the world.

"If everyone made just one small contribution..." she said a little wistfully during a recent interview at Icehouse.

As a photographer for the past fifteen years, Gray has tried to focus on social issues with the purpose of informing people. This is not surprising considering her background as an anthropology student.

"I try to do this in ways that are not shocking and upsetting, but rather contemplative and sometimes even beautiful," she said. "I started out focusing on women's femininity in light of the women's rights movement. I thought a lot of femininity was getting lost as women identified more with what they did professionally as opposed to how they lived personally. All the feminine things that women have traditionally done, such as being homemakers and mothers, were being eclipsed by the importance of career."

Perhaps as a result of her interest in women in a domestic setting, Gray later got involved in photographing the last three Shaker women in the world. I look puzzled. "I didn't know this either, at the time," she said. "But they lived in northern Maine. It was an incredible experience and I had a big show as a result of this work." (Shakers, a religious off-shoot of the English Quakers, were zealous missionaries who believed that all property be held in common and that all men – and women – were created equal.)

Another of Gray's interests took her to Ireland, where she lived for a time years ago. Remembering images of poor children there, Gray decided to return and photograph them and their communities during the 1990s.

Photographer/curator Hannah Gray

Child girl in Dublin, photographed by Hannah Gray

"When I lived in Ireland, I was shocked by the commonplaceness of children begging in a poor section of Dublin. As I went to work each day, I would see the most abhorrent situations, and remembering this I went back to photograph the children."

The areas of the city Gray wanted to explore were places where other Dubliners would never enter. There was lots of drugs and crime. But Gray was determined and decided to go on a Sunday morning because she figured the adults and parents would be hung over and sleeping from the night before and the kids would be running wild. She was right.

"I was able to spend the whole day photographing these children and it was one of my favorite shoots ever," she remembers. "The kids were wearing these unusual hand-me-down clothes, which often came from Russia, and they kept asking me to take them home with me. It was devastating, but beautiful."

A few years later, Gray went back to Ireland, this time to Belfast in the north. And it just so happened that the last big bomb had just gone off before the peace accord, and so Gray witnessed the event in which twenty-nine people were killed, many of them children.

"I spent an incredible four or five days photographing in the rain before returning here and having a big show in Philadelphia." Gray was so moved by the entire experience that she donated all the proceeds from the show to a number of organizations in Ireland to benefit the surviving children.

A few years later, when Gray was about to embark upon what she projected would be a 10-year project – photographing women on Death Row – a call came from Deb Whitney. Whitney said that she was going to give up her Greenport gallery, Whitney Art Works, and wanted to know if Gray was interested in taking it over.

"I said yes immediately!" Grey replied.

When she took over the space on First Street, Gray's main goal was to showcase important artists, both local and international.

"But I didn't want to show things that have been seen and seen and seen. I wanted to show things that people won't easily or readily see. There are many wonderful artists out here, and I think it's important to show them, but not at the expense of ignoring artists from New York or Europe or wherever. For me, it's really about the art, not where artists are from."

Gray's goal is to showcase really high quality work in her shows, such as the current one, "Clocks and Boxes," which features the work of Scott McIntire and Richard Hoschler. (McIntire's super realistic paintings of period clocks in era-representative settings are wonderful with their vibrant colors and Hoschler's dioramas are compellingly complex, three-dimensional mixed-media assemblages.) And downstairs, in a newly-created screening room replete with white glass pendants hanging from a ceiling draped dramatically in gray cloth, Gray's showing independent films, often hard to come by, that no one would ever see otherwise.

"The films I show even I can't get a hold of sometimes" she says wryly.

Gray goes to film festivals, such as Woodstock, Aspen, New York Expo Shorts, and the Long Island Film Festival held annually in Westhampton Beach, with an eye toward assembling programs with underlying themes.

The Angola Prison Rodeo, a film that she has been showing regularly, is rather controversial because it features prisoners, lifers and Death Row convicts, who have never been on a horse, let alone a bull.

"The controversy surrounds the fact that many of the men get injured, but to them, they are STARS for the day, and it gives them something to hope for or to remember instead of just sitting there rotting in jail." This film has inspired Gray to pursue a special exhibit of incarcerated children's work, and she is currently pursuing this goal.

FIRST LONG ISLAND WINE CLASSIC NETS $33,000 FOR EASTERN LONG ISLAND HOSPITALS

The inaugural Wine Spectator magazine's Long Island Wine Classic held August 23 as the kick-off party for the Hampton Classic Horse Show raised $33,000 for Eastern Long Island's three hospitals: Central Suffolk, Eastern Long Island and Southampton.

At a check presentation ceremony on Friday, October 3, the CEOs from the three hospitals each received checks for $11,000 from Marco Borghese, president of the Long Island Wine Council, and Dennis Suskind, president of the Hampton Classic.

Marco Borghese, Paul Conner, Annette Leahy, Andrew Mitchell, Dennis Suskind

Commenting on the donation, Annette Leahy, Southampton Hospital CEO, said, "We are very pleased with the support the Long Island wine industry has demonstrated by this event to the East End's healthcare system. It brought the entire East End together."

Andrew Mitchell, Central Suffolk Hospital CEO, said, "We extend our thanks to the Long Island Wine Council and the Hampton Classic for their wonderful support of our East End hospitals and, like a fine wine, we look forward to aging well together." His comments were echoed by Paul Connor, CEO of Eastern Long Island Hospital. Connor praised the combined effort of the Long Island Wine Council and the Hampton Classic for "supporting the East End hospitals through this new and unique event."

"It was a great beginning to what we hope will become a tradition on our show grounds," said Suskind. "What better way to celebrate the end of the summer than with the best Long Island has to offer?"

A Harvest of Time

Pumpkins, squash, apples, wine. Fall's East End bounty makes summer's departure so much easier to bear. Despite the grumblings of weather people that we are overdue for a full blown tropical storm, all is calm for the moment as grapes ripen under their nets and large orange orbs appear amidst the giant leaves of pumpkin plants. Though potato farmers are preparing to dig this year's crop in earnest, tomatoes are still juicy and sweet corn still sweet. Summer's long farewell will linger, as it always does, even as days grow short and moonlit dips in the bay turn to memories.

Claudio's. In its 133rd year of continuous family ownership. Claudio's symbolizes the North Fork much as the Monauk Lighthouse represents the South Fork. The lovingly preserved bar was rescued from the bowery in 1885. You're truly drinking in history when enjoying a famed martini there. New chef Michael Ruggiero cleverly traces the restaurant's history. He's not only maintained Claudio's time-honored favorites, but his specials reflect founder Manuel Claudio's Portugese and Mediterranean ancestry. And if you like your oysters raw, sea-fresh and plump, you'll do no better from here to Chesapeake Bay. 111 Main St., Greenport. 477-0627. Entrees, $17-$26. (Bradbrook, 7/25/03).

Do Little's. Very welcoming and unpretentious. An excellent menu for diners interested in fresh, smartly prepared dishes that are not calorically trumped up. Thai mussels in ginger/lemongrass broth hit the mark. Excellent pasta dishes, headlined by justifiably famous Seafood Pasta in white wine sauce, filled with mussels, clams and shrimp over linguine with fresh tomatoes and spinach. Stuffed ravioli with sun-dried tomatoes and mozzarella is beautifully done. Sensibly priced wine list, with a knowing nod to local vintages. Entrees, $12.95-$19.95. Rt. 25, Mattituck Plaza, Mattituck. 298-4000. (Bradbrook, 7/28/01). [G]

Ile de Beaute. In a beautiful old house with courtyard tables, the spirit of Provence is alive in Greenport with highly authentic French cuisine. Its treatment of classics like escargots, French onion soup, and frogs' legs runs the gamut from superb to extraordinary. Rack of lamb, served with rosemary sauce reduction, is masterly. Desserts are tasty and the crepe options are best expressed in exponential notation. Service is deliberate but attentive. Entrees $24-35. 314 Main Street, Greenport. (Bradbrook, 7/12/02). [C,H,J]

La Cuvee Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartar and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakable Asian influence. But executive chef / owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03). [S]

Pepi's. Dazzling panoramic views of Peconic Bay and sumptuous Northern Italian cooking combine for a sensuous dining experience. Appetizers include a highly flavorful vegetable antipasto and a fresh tri-color salad of arugula, radicchio, and endive. Penne ala vodka, often predictable, is anything but here. The penne is served perfectly al dente and the sauce is both smooth and smoky. Also delicious is chicken Sorrentino, with eggplant, proscuitto and fresh mozzarella. Come dessert, do not miss the tiramisu, co-owner Nick Nikolov's specialty, an all-time keeper. Entrees $16-19. Port of Egypt Marine, Southold. 765-6373. (Bradbrook, 6/8/01). [K,O,Q]

merly of Lespinasse, has opened a fine new restaurant in Mattituck. His menu is quite versatile and his consistently tasty dishes excite the palate. Typically adventurous and successful is the pan-seared monkfish with a yellow tomato sauce and black olive purée topped by crispy fried leeks. Mazzella's treatment of fish epitomizes Greek and Italian-style preparation at its best. The appetizer of heirloom tomatoes with boccocini mozzarella and fresh basil and balsamic vinegar is a tomato dish for the ages. Innovative desserts, too. Entrees – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Bradbrook, 6/14/02). [E,N]

Ross' Rotisserie and Smokehouse. A casual, homey eat-in or take-out spot opened by John Ross, former chef/owner of Ross' North Fork Restaurant. Great rotisserie and crispy fried chicken; marinated, honey-glazed duck legs; hickory-smoked spareribs; homemade soups and chowders; many cooked-from-scratch side dishes. Every Friday fish fry is an excellent value. A special 6-pound LI duck, cooked crisp, boned and quartered, accompanied by duck sauce and a garnish of apricots and cranberries ($19.99) is available by reservation the day before. Open 7 days 12-8. Route 48, Southold, 765-9655. (Simm, 10/5/01). [U]

The Seafood Barge. The North Fork restaurant for fish lovers. Owner/manager team of Dick Ehrlich and Betsey Flinn are as fanatical about results as Steinbrenner/Torre. Newly imported executive chef Michael Meehan updates the menu's standards and introduces several of his own specialties. Vichyssoise spiked with crab meat and basil oil was a rousing success. Marinated baby octopus with baby spinach was succulent and tender. As for the fish, the sushi appetizer continues to be stellar. The pan-seared striped bass with a red pepper broth is a revelation. Desserts are sensational. Excellent wine list, particularly local vintages. Entrees $24-$32. Port of Egypt Marina, Rt. 25, Southold. 765-3010. (Bradbrook, 7/26/02). [M,SF]

The Shady Lady Restaurant. The Zorn family's vision of stately elegance comes to the North Fork in this grandly unique dining room. Two rooms actually, with dinner jackets de rigueur in the Scarlet Room and a more casual ambience pervading the lodge-like Pine Room. The menu keeps apace with the opulence of the surroundings. Chef Ross Essner's cosmopolitan cooking style is globally savvy, but local-ingredient particular. Especially breathtaking is the lobster risotto with diver scallop and asparagus. A superb cheese plate complements the dessert choices and the wines are as excellently-chosen as they are reasonably-priced. 305 North Road, Greenport. 477-4500. Entrees, $28-$38. (Bradbrook, 7/18/03).

Touch of Venice. Top-notch Italian cuisine in a delightful setting on Mattituck Inlet. Named appropriately for location, cuisine and a large mural dominating the dining room, this is family dining par excellence with a sophisticated ambience. Among the kitchen's highlights: Orient Point oysters, chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with gorgonzola; black angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster Meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special, is an exciting dish of imaginative complexity and one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood bruschetta is another special to watch for. Entrees $16-$34. Wickham Avenue at Matt-A-Mar Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02). [L]

"I am working on getting the prisons to let me show the work of the children, but there's a lot of red tape. When I saw Aiden Quinn's most recent film, Song for a Raggy Boy, I saw how well-meaning can start one way but turn into something else, a punitive thing. I'm not saying that these kids haven't done horrible things and that they shouldn't be punished, but what is the point if you don't do something to help them change?"

Speaking of Aiden Quinn, the actor has agreed to come to Icehouse for a special screening of his film Song for a Raggy Boy, which is about a reform school in Ireland that was very violent.

"Aiden was actually very interested in coming when I mentioned it," said Gray. "Of course he asked, where's Greenport? But that's changing fast." And directors, Gray is finding, are also often happy to come out and discuss their work, whether there's a big crowd or just 20 people. "It's always interesting to hear their perspective," she said. Song for a Raggy Boy's director, Aisling Walsh, along with Quinn, may also make an appearance at Icehouse for the film's screening. "The film is really upsetting," said Gray, "but both Quinn and Walsh feel that it's important for people to know about these schools, these establishments, that existed at the time. They were repositories for children in trouble, and they were supposed to teach them a new way." (Proceeds from this special screening and appearance will benefit Hope House Ministries, a home run by Father Frank of Port Jefferson for troubled boys.)

Also coming up, in November, is a special appearance by choreographer Paul Taylor, whose film Dancemaker, about Taylor's renowned dance company, will be screened. Taylor will speak after one of the screenings, and the choreographer's assemblages will be shown simultaneously in the gallery upstairs. "Most people don't know about Taylor's art aside from his choreography," said Gray. "I didn't know. I went to his house and he said, hey, look at these. He's a very interesting man."

Work by Richard Hoschler

During Thanksgiving weekend, Icehouse plans to screen Saint Monica, a film from Canada, which Gray said was very difficult to obtain. (Saint Monica is a poignant story about a young Catholic Portuguese girl whose most fervent wish is to be an angel in her church's annual summer procession. When she learns she is to be replaced in the parade, Monica steals a pair of "angel wings," which she then loses on a streetcar. In the process of trying to recover the wings, Monica learns something about being a real angel.)

Aside from the Cinema Arts Center in Huntington, which began many, many years ago and is still thriving, there is nothing like this screening room/gallery on Long Island. There may not be a lot of money in this venture, but for Gray, it's not about the money.

"That's not what compels me. I'll show the films if there are only three people in the downstairs screening room. I love to see the expressions on their faces. I might show a documentary, a little drama, something comedic, but I always try to end on an upbeat note. There are these beautiful student films that will NEVER get to the Big Screen, but they are such wonderful little thoughts, and they really deserve to be shown. People laugh, then cry, then laugh again. And they hug me when they leave. It's a real emotional experience. It's just wonderful."

Hannah Gray lives in Greenport with her husband and two children. Icehouse gallery is open weekends from noon-5, and screenings take place every Saturday evening at 7 and again at 9. Food is generously provided by Aldo's of Greenport, and wine is often donated by area wineries. Located on First Street in the former ice house next to Salamander General Store. Call 477-0745.

Away At School...By David Lion Rattiner

FINDING MY DRINK

Quite possibly one of the toughest decisions that I have to make these days is finding my alcoholic drink of choice when I go to a bar. Now that both my roommate and I are twenty-one, heading off to a bar is not as exciting as it once was.

I can remember very well, way back when I was twenty, the sense of excitement, fear, and danger that I used to get when a bunch of us would try to get into a bar. Usually nothing worked. We would get fake IDs, or use other people's IDs, but up here in Boston, it is like they are trained military ID soldiers. It is impossible to get a fake ID past a bouncer.

Now, however, things are a little different. I don't need to worry about not getting into a bar. Now I just walk right in, not caring about anything. When I get asked for my ID I give the bouncer a look like he is an idiot.

"What, you can't tell that I'm twenty-one? I'm bigger than you are."

But of course, I pull out my wallet, give him my beautiful New York State license that no longer has those big red letters that say "Under 21", and hand it over to him. He looks at it for a minute, bends it, examines it at different angles, then hands it back to me, safe and sound and lets me in.

Sweet. It is all just too easy.

My first week of being twenty-one, as you may already know, was pretty rough. I wanted to go out to the bar just about every night and live it up. I would go through about fifty bucks, wake up sick the next day, wish I hadn't gone out; and, then do it all over again. After five mornings of this, however, I came to the conclusion that this was getting out of hand. Now, I am a mature twenty-one-year- old. I have been twenty-one for about a month and a half and I really dislike this routine.

First off, nothing about beer or liquor is good for you. Every single time I go out for a beer now that I am twenty-one, I feel like I have gained two pounds per beer. My stomach feels fat. I feel lousy and then I want to go to the gym as soon as possible and get on a cardio machine. Yes, that is right, you heard correctly, a cardio machine. This is a new concept for me as well. I never used the cardio machines at the gym. The gym was strictly for bench press and biceps curls last year. I would want to GAIN weight when I went to the gym and was not twenty-one. I would hope that I would GAIN pounds of muscle on my chest and on my biceps. Now that I am twenty-one however, I want to get on the Stairmaster and LOSE. It's terrible.

The other thing that I find very difficult about being twenty-one is that I never know what to have when I get to the bar. Bars are not like restaurants where they give you some time to think things over before you order. The bartender almost always expects you to be ready with what you want to drink the second that you belly up.

This really frustrates me. I feel rushed and I almost always end up ordering a beer, which is not what I really want. I want to find a special "Dave Rattiner" drink. I want to find a drink that nobody else in the world wants to order except me. Like James Bond with his martinis, which by the way I was ordering for a while and they taste horrible.

For some reason, I feel like there is this endless combination of alcoholic beverages that you can order. I feel like there are thousands and that anybody, if they want to, can have a unique drink. I just feel like such an idiot when I order a beer. That seems to be what everyone does. I want to be a rebel. I want to be the guy that orders a drink that nobody else knows about and then has to be asked what it is. Then people will ask to taste it and their eyes will light up because it is so good. Then, even though I ordered it first, they will order it as well and copy me. That way, I will be the trendsetter.

But, of course, there is no other drink out there besides beer and rum and coke. That seems to be basically the whole thing. I was telling this to my Dad and he told me that I should just order what I like. The problem with this is that the drink that I really think tastes great is a cosmopolitan. But what kind of guy drinks a cosmopolitan? I guess there is a good side to this problem of not knowing what "my" drink is…I get to sample a lot of different drinks.

Classic Cars With Bob Gelber

Recently, I wrote a column titled "The Test of Time" explaining how certain cars hold up better over the years than others. My opinion was that the 1955 and 1956 Chrysler 300 models were not only the most attractive but also the most valuable of the series. As it turned out, I learned that those particular models were not the most valuable when all hell broke loose on my computer.

I gleaned three facts from the emails that poured in from Chrysler 300 enthusiasts across the country.

First, Dan's Papers really gets around. Second, my column is well read, and third, that there is a hyper-responsive Chrysler 300 owners' club out there. These cars are rare in fact, when was the last time you saw one at a car show? The '55 Chrysler 300 was America's first muscle car. Remember that, all you GTO, Trans Am and Z-28 fans.

Those emails reminded me how passionate collectors are about their cars. Ford collectors are die-hard crazies about any vehicle with Henry's name on it. I personally have great affection for the Ford flathead V-8 engines. I've been among Ford fanatics who talk as if Jesus would have driven a car with these engines.

An acquaintance, whom I consider to be one of the finest exotic car mechanics on the East End, owns a semi-restored 1928 Oldsmobile. In everyday life, he doesn't give a rat's butt about those expensive foreign machines, but talks about his vintage Olds like it's his favorite relative.

I don't know anyone who collects pre-war Chevrolets, but the guys who own the 50s models covet them like gold. And, gold they are. The value of these cars has climbed almost beyond belief. A '57 Chevrolet convertible is the gold standard. Forget early Corvettes, they are now more expensive than some vintage Ferraris. These small block, big block guys love their Chevys, because not only are they easy to restore with every part available, but if you play your cards right and keep the car basically stock and original, you can double your money in half a decade.

The British sports car clubs around the country are full of older owners who drove foreign roadsters in their youth, MGs, Austin Healys, Triumphs and Jags are favorites. To a man or woman who follows these marques, there is no better vehicle. British sports cars go beyond being just sports cars. They were the first of their type. They introduced Americans to the joy of driving a small, lightweight, responsive vehicle that had superior handling compared to all the other vehicles on the highways at the time. To this day they have character, class and leaky soft-tops. I've never yet met a collector of a British sports car who didn't like his ride.

If you are lucky enough to have the means to afford a collector Ferrari, you are a happy person indeed. Having been to many Ferrari events, I know that these people are both knowledgeable and enthusiastic about their cars, as well they should be. Over the years, Ferrari has built the finest and most beautiful sports cars in the world.

Porsche owners are fanatics. The Porsche Club of America has been around promoting their cars since I was a little kid. Early on, Porsches were affordable, but today they are pricey. Most of the true Porsche nuts own early more affordable 911s, as well as the old four cylinder 356 series of cars. I've always felt that the new Porsches, with the exception of the excellent Boxster, are so expensive that a lot of poseurs are buying them, not because of enthusiasm for the marque, but for status. Whatever the reason, Porsche is truly one of the world's great sports cars, and deserves any type of owner loyalty it gets, and it gets a lot.

Truth be told, American car collectors look at foreign car collectors with disdain. Let's face it, to guys who like American iron, those little foreign jobs, with their puny engines, just don't cut it. On the other side of the coin, the foreign car guys just don't like "Yank Tanks". Their engines are too big and their handling is too sloppy. Even though a Chevy costs more than an MG, the foreign car guys feel it reeks of middle class. If it don't have wire wheels with "undo" written on the knock-off hubs, it just ain't cool.

Then we have the guys who collect German or Italian cars, and the true leftist collectors, with their French cars. The German car guys tend to be a little pompous, like their vehicles. They do have bragging rights, since Karl Benz is credited with inventing the first road-worthy automobile, and one has to admit that Daimler and Porsche build excellent cars. Don't you agree that any car that has a history of costing a bundle should be great? The Italian Alfa Romeo and Fiat collectors love their cars because they really want Ferraris but can't afford them. But these cars have the same DNA as Ferraris, so under the skin of every new Ferrari lurks vestiges of Fiats and Alfas. I personally would love to own any model vintage Alfa Romeo, provided it was built before lunch.

Ah, the French. They are a strange people who build cars for themselves and no one else. That's why their Citroen and Peugeot failed in the American marketplace. French car collectors are unique; weirdness works for them. Having owned a Citroen ID 19 sedan in the 60s, I'd say it was a technical tour de force. There is a place for French cars. France.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

UNDER THE TUSCAN SUN & THE SCHOOL OF ROCK

For actors, accepting a role can be as charmingly chancy as pulling a gift from an office party grab bag or as direly defining as playing Russian roulette. A couple of actors who've won the prize are the stunningly sensual Diane Lane and that Porky Pig-like funny guy, Jack Black.

Ms. Lane, the consummate performer, may be best known for her devouringly sensitive engagement of illicit sex in "Unfaithful". Now, cast as a disheartened divorcee recuperating in Italy in "Under The Tuscan Sun," she uses the same intimate eroticism she so easily arouses with the flick of a finger or eyelash to no great gains in this romance-washed, bleached-out scenario of Ivory soapiness on a slippery road to self-fulfillment.

You will need rose-colored sun glasses to cut down the elaborate glaring additions stuccoed onto Frances Mayes'. memoir of her affair with a lovely, handyman's special, a "Villa Fixeruppa." As written for the screen by director Audrey Wells, Ms. Mayes' intimate joys of renovation (mostly with the man she later marries) have been redesigned for more interest. Characters and plots have been added to the original structure. In the book she had freestanding individuals whom she took serious note of. In the film, she harbors a lesbian friend (Sandra Oh) from San Francisco, who is there for a jagged edge. For giggly laughs, there is a British actress (Lindsay Duncan). For smooth smooching, an Italian lover who's quite Italian – he's unreliable. When he's there, it's magic, all sun and dreamscapes. When he's not, the sun still shines on Lane's Frances and her beautiful-ness. That's the trouble with the movie version. The whole joyous world revolves around Frances's sunny-ness. Others wallow in the shadow of her smile or the new portico.

Then, there's the geekish, cartoon character seen in "High Fidelity" and "Shallow Hal." You might have thought of Jack Black as amusing and possibly a loser. But wisely cast as a shamelessly over-hip, over-amped, out-of-tune and out-of-work rock and roll musician in "The School of Rock," he gives a genuinely off-the-charts, acting tour de force worthy of any of the trophies being bandied about these days.

"The School of Rock" is winning in every way. Directed by Richard Linklater and scripted by Mike White of "Chuck & Buck," the film takes on a fascinating life of pure enjoyment as lead guitarist Black is thrown out of his group because of his egotistical King of Rock heavy metal showboating. He is forced to fake his way into a job as a substitute teacher in a square school with a class of fifth graders so rectangular that their uniform ambition is surpassed only by their dweebness. They're studying serious classical music and know Barbra Streisand and the music from "Annie" Oh! Good grief! They're the first post-rock generation.

Black takes the challenge. He can really teach them something. He will get them to feel and love the noise and know that it's not just a sound – it's a form of rebellion. He believes in "Rock-n-Roll." Luckily, the students are smart. They know Black's a second-rate musician but, like great teachers, he loves the subject so much that they catch his bliss.

Joan Cusack punches up the fun as the repressed principal with hidden desires.. Going back to school with "Rock" can be as infectious as measles. You can connect all the dots and come away with a very rosy picture.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/ writer/ director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

ART COMMENTARYWHEN ETHNICITY COUNTS: MOSES ROS AT SOLAR Part II

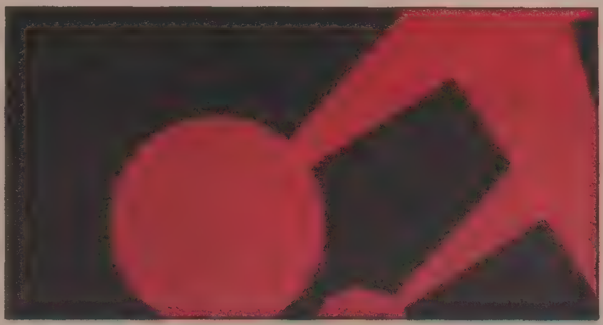
Last week's "Art Commentary" suggested that two current shows by Jewish artists may have been influenced by ethnicity, either directly or indirectly. Some may have disagreed with that thesis, including the artists themselves. Moses Ros' exhibit at the Solar Gallery, however, addresses the issue more succinctly. While Mr. Ros is a native New Yorker, he is a Spanish artist with Dominican Republican roots showing at a venue specializing in Latin art and design.

Mr. Ros' media seems indigenous to Latin culture: print-making and sculpture. For example, paper is inexpensive and accessible in some developing nations that this critic is familiar with, such as Mexico and Cuba. Second, sculptures and mural are very much a part of everyday life in many Latin countries. (Wish we could say the same in the United States. Of course, we do have graffiti as public art. Does that count?) Murals, particularly, are images indicating an activity or place, like a library or school, expressed in bold, exciting ways. They also often feature historical events or people.



Mr. Ros' symbolic themes seem to be indigenous as well in his linoleum prints signifying variations on his sculptures: mini-studies of trees. The tree serves as a metaphor for life and life-affirming values, like action and hope. The artist's geometric abstractions capture this with circles (an appropriate shape for life) spinning off more angular forms, as if they are being launched from the picture plane into the universe. Or more to the point, being aimed at us, the viewer.

Moreover, this interactive quality relates to the place that sculptures play in Latin countries. It is a construct which Mr. Ros gravitates toward, most notably his Bronx installation in a community garden. (Future public endeavors include both a stained glass mural located in a subway station and an installation at a Bronx day care center.)

It's curious that one print seems to go beyond the tree shape evoking life. To this critic it looked like the Statute of Liberty with its orange, blue and pink hues. Is Mr. Ros suggesting that his art is not merely influenced by his ethnic roots but by America as well?

Works by Moses Ros will be on view at East Hampton's Sola Gallery for the next several weeks, although his show officially ends on Oct. 10.

HONORING THE ARTIST: NIDIA D'ALESSANDRO

This week's cover by Shelter Island resident, Nidia D'Alessandro, is a work of both love and commitment. There is the artist's love for Shelter Island, which is celebrating its 350th anniversary, and her commitment to capturing what is unique about a particular time and place.

First there is Ms. AlD'Alessandro's passion for Shelter Island, an area where she and her husband, sculptor Luiz Coelho, have lived for twenty-five years. While the locale did not exactly remind the couple of their home in Brazil, it was captivating. "When we first settled here," Ms. D'Alessandro says, "there were not many homes around. We fell in love with this small house that was part of a bigger house, which we rented for two years. Then we rented a tower, called Shore Wood. Back then we were all like one big family."

We have a feeling that she still thinks of the residents as family despite the ensuing years. In fact, Ms. D'Alessandro admits that when she's not painting, her favorite activities are gardening and visiting friends.

Being particularly interested in houses has made Ms. D'Alessandro an ideal choice to create a poster for Shelter Island's anniversary. Butthe project was not an easy one to accomplish. "The historic society had to get permission to include certain homes on the poster," she explains. "Then Luiz photographed all the residences and helped me do a layout of the poster's composition. Then I had to fit the shapes I had designed to specific homes. After that, I sketched each dwelling, one-by-one, and then painted them, using their real colors. Of course, I had to do the same process with both the North and South ferryboats. All together it took six months to do."

It's obvious that the results were worth it, especially if one is familiar with well-known homes, like The Old County Inn, a former residence which is now a restaurant, and the Sylvester House, an abode of Shelter Island's original owner.

Ms. D'Alessandro is not a novice to rendering historic places. She did a large painting for Sag Harbor's St. Andrew Church, depicting Main Street in the morning. And this is where her commitment to celebrating a time and place plays another salient part. "I must have taken a hundred photographs of Main Street," the artist notes with enthusiasm.

"We'd go in the morning and in late afternoon. I knew exactly what perspective I wanted. This painting took eight months to complete. It was then turned into a poster."

Who knows what other places Ms. D'Alessandro will turn to next. While she says she'd like to visit Madeira Island, near Portugal, to study the handmade tiles and courtyards, you can bet she'll be forever tied to her home in Shelter Island, nonetheless.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Black sea bass, a fish that is available locally in early summer, disappears for a bit then returns in early fall, showed up at Cor-J's last week, a fish market in Hampton Bays. While there I was delighted to find they had local seasonal sea scallops in the shell with their roe so I bought a few to "play with." With a basket of yellow plum tomatoes I picked up at the Green Thumb in Water Mill on my way home I proceeded to adapt a recipe for sea bass with Pernod flavored tomato sauce. A marvelous recipe from Christian Mir of the Stone Creek Inn in East Quogue. My husband and I had a feast preceding the bass with broiled scallops on the half shell, drizzled with extra-virgin oil, fresh thyme and coarse sea salt. The orange colored roe, firm and delicious, nestled alongside the sweet scallop. I was truly happy.

Several days later a sports fisherman I know gifted me with a gorgeous piece of striped bass. I remembered some notes I was given for striped bass, Greek style with oregano and lemon. It is truly a find.

How fortunate we are to be so close to the source and to have available the best the sea has to offer. One of the most common mistakes people make with fish is overcooking. As most fish will cook quickly I prep ingredients ahead for readiness. Any accompanying ingredients can be kept warm or timed to finish cooking (rice, potato, vegetable, etc.) as the fish is done. The moment fish goes from transparent to opaque it is ready. I have been telling my students for years, "If fish flakes it is overcooked."

GRILLED STRIPED BASS, GREEK STYLE

While I was getting my hair cut one day, my hairdresser Darryl Solera of Cache in Bridgehampton shared the basics of this delectable recipe – and it couldn't be simpler.

Serves 4 - 6

2 - 2 1/2 pounds striped bass fillet
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon dried oregano
1 teaspoon each Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil

1. Cut fish into 7-8-ounce fillets. Trim any bones from fish and discard. Rinse and pat dry with paper towel. Place garlic powder, oregano, salt and pepper in a small bowl. Divide mixture and rub generously into the fish on both sides. Let marinate for 20-30 minutes. Meanwhile combine lemon juice and olive oil in a glass measure.

"Red Plate" by Adam Smith

2. Prepare grill to cook fish. (I cooked mine on an indoor gas grill.) When medium-hot place the fish on the grill and cook for about 4 minutes on one side. Half way through cooking spoon 1/4 of the lemon juice olive oil mix over the fish. Turn fish to cook other side for another 3-4 minutes until barely firm to the touch. Spoon 1/4 more lemon/oil mixture. When done, transfer to warm plates and pour remaining lemon/oil mixture over the fish. Serve at once.

PAN ROASTED SEA BASS WITH TOMATO PROVENCAL

Prepare the sauce ahead and warm through while cooking the quickly cooked fish.

Serves 4

For the sauce
1/2 pint yellow plum or cherry tomatoes, rinsed and halved
1/2 pint red plum or cherry tomatoes, rinsed and halved
3-4 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
3-4 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1/4 cup Pernod
Coarse (Kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
3 tablespoons finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley

For the fish
4 sea bass fillets, skin on, pin bones removed
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

1. Heat a non-stick or heavy bottom skillet over medium heat. Put in 3 tablespoons oil and the tomatoes and cook for 3-4 minutes until tomatoes begin to wilt. Stir in garlic and saute for about 1 minute longer. Add the Pernod stirring to deglaze the pan juices. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Put in the parsley and cook for 1 minute more. Keep warm to serve with the fish.

2. Score the skin side of the fish twice vertically and twice horizontally. Rinse and pat dry with paper towels and season both sides with salt and pepper. Heat a large non-stick or heavy bottom skillet over medium heat. Put in 3 tablespoons olive oil then put in the fish fillets, skin-side down. Saute until bottom is crispy, about 3 minutes. Carefully turn with a fish spatula to finish cooking the other side, about 3 minutes more. Serve fish topped with sauce Provencal.

Giuliano Bugialli, award-winning cookbook author and renowned authority on Tuscan and regional Italian cooking returns to Silvia Lehrer's Cookhampton Saturday Eve. Nov. 1. Call (631) 537 7831 for information and registration.

Dining in the Hamptons

Bobby Van's

2393 Main St., Bridgehampton
631-537-0590

Bobby Van's is a classic. Actually, on the East End, it is the classic. Its reputation has grown and changed over the years, from the local, dark-wood bar where writers and artists propped themselves up around the piano while drinking their fabled drinks, to the destination steak house, where locals, weekenders and our glamorous visitors meet, week after week, in a setting that makes everyone comfortable.

From the 2-ft. pepper grinders to the wood-handled monogrammed steak knives, it is clear that Bobby Van's is serious about its all–prime beef. On my last visit, among the many specials were the gorgonzola-smothered steak, served hot out of the oven, bubbling and crispy on top, and the Kobe beef brisket pot au feu, both recommended "must-tries" by our waiter, Zack. Being a non meat-eater myself (though evenings like this actually tempt me to indulge), I jealously watched my husband try, and almost finish, both.

In his words, there are no words. The creamy Gorgonzola and the perfectly done sirloin are an irresistibly rich combination and will, we hope, appear often on the fall and winter menus. Joe Phair, the owner of the four Bobby Van's restaurants (whose newest just opened at 131 E. 54th Street, NYC) explained how the menu changes through the seasons. After creating something that they believe is worthy, he and the chef, Johnny Stella, watch over it on the "specials" board, to see if everyone loves it. Only when that is a resounding yes is the dish deemed deserving, and it becomes a regular on the menu.

From the "ooh" and "ahs" I heard the other evening, the brisket has a good chance. Made from Kobe beef, whose renown among meat eaters is legendary (as is its normally exorbitant price) the brisket is cooked with potatoes, carrots and pearl onions, and served in a rich gravy. The meat is from the same stock as the Japanese delicacy, but the cut is from a slightly different location, and therefore, $30. I am told it is exquisite, and that afterwards, nearly impossible to go back to the old-fashioned one.

What was I eating while all of this was going on? I did not suffer, let me assure you. Although Bobby Van's is the place for steak, it is also a place for everything else, it seems. We began with my absolute new favorite decadent appetizer, which I ordered from the bar menu because I couldn't resist trying it. Chili sautéed calamari. Sounds simple, but the flavor of the sweet chili pepper sauce, scallions, and cilantro is so complex and exciting that I had to stop myself from finishing the enormous portion, so that I could taste other things. It was not easy. Our other appetizer was seared tuna, sushi-quality, of course, charred around the edges, ruby red in the middle, served with sticky rice and seaweed salad. It was light and refreshing.

By 8:15 p.m., when our first course arrived, the restaurant was packed. Not just full, but packed. There were people at the door, anxiously peeking around the flower arrangement to see if they would be lucky enough to get a table while groups at the bar watched the baseball playoffs and every table was filled. People were in fact still coming in at 10 p.m. for dinner, and you could practically hear their sighs of relief when they were seated. On the way into the Hamptons or on the way out, Bobby Van's is the place to stop. To use an overused phrase, it is the place to be. Fortunately, the restaurant retains its welcoming charm from way back when, and no one is out of place.

After the appetizers, I tried the scallops and poached lobster with tarragon, hedgehog mushrooms over spinach. The scallops were sweet, the spinach steamed and plain to offset the richness of the lobster and butter, and the combination was lovely. I also tasted the hoisin and ginger glazed, salmon, with snap peas, shitake mushrooms and basmati rice. The glazed formed a crunchy top on the salmon, giving it a very interesting texture, and it was unusual and delicious.

We drank glasses of pinot grigio and cabernet. The by-the-glass selections from the wine list ranges in price from $7-$9 for red and $7-12 for white. As you would expect at a premiere steakhouse, the wine list is extensive and inclusive of a wide range of prices and regions. All drinks on the "specialty" drinks menu are $10, and the fun includes "the ultimate" margarita and a creamsicle martini.

There are five different menus at Bobby Van's: brunch, lunch, dinner, bar and prix-fixe, now Sunday-Friday from 5 p.m. to closing. For $25, choose from four appetizers including shrimp or pork dumpling, five entrees, including favorites filet of sole, rib-eye steak, and pan roasted chicken, and three desserts. A la carte, you can try the shepherd's pie, Bobby Van burger or a 1-1/4lbs. Lobster. Combined, the menus offer over 75 dishes.

We debated the desserts and couldn't decide, so we left it up to Zack. After five years at the restaurant, and a great deal of time spent with us on this evening, we figured he'd choose well. We ended up with the chocolate fondant cake, which is a shell of chocolate filled chocolate mousse, served with crème anglaise and topped with cappuccino ice cream, and the apple tartin with vanilla ice cream. Besides being a talented waiter and a true professional, Zack is now, in my mind, a very good friend. Because the desserts were amazing. Though the fondant is described as a shell, there was nothing hard about it. I prefer to call it creamy, with a shape. Not too eloquent, but you have to try it to believe it. My husband called it the "filet mignon" of chocolate and it was. Not too sweet, you could actually "taste the taste" of the chocolate. Chocolate lovers will know exactly what I mean. The dessert made from fruit would most likely fall unnoticed in this company, but the tartin was no second best. It was the size of a small pizza, made from the thinnest slices of tart apples, baked to a wilting perfection. Its size notwithstanding, it seemed to float off the plate.

After three hours of feasting, we reluctantly took our leave. The warm atmosphere, level of service rivaling the best New York restaurants and the fabulous food is calling us back. –Robin F. Smith

Bobby Van's is open everyday for lunch 11:30-4:30, with an added brunch menu on Saturday and Sunday. Dinner is 5 p.m.- 10 p.m. nightly, and until 11 p.m. on Friday and Saturday.

ARF's PUP And OP CAT Programs

Nearly 30 years after its inception, Animal Rescue Fund, the most impressive shelter in the East End, is undergoing a major expansion. Through the decades the original shelter began to address more and more specific needs of the community, needs that could only be met through outreach with the help of volunteers. These new services brought about the establishment of new programs, some of which may not be commonly know, such as the PUP program and OP CAT for feral cats. PUP and OP CAT have made a major difference to the cats and dogs in the Hamptons where so many summer house pets have been historically left behind on the lawns of vacated summer rentals. I remember walking on a back street in Sag Harbor with my little dog Disney during the mid-1960s and suddenly being surrounded by a pack of snarling, wolf-like canines—no doubt the feral offspring of pets that had been left behind by summer residents. And I remember seeing emaciated cats in our backyard—battered, frightened feral cats that wouldn't approach food we put out for them until they knew we were nowhere in sight.

Abandoned house pets and their progeny were a pathetic sight that is no longer common in the Hamptons, largely due to the inception of ARF programs. Along with a campaign urging temporary residents to bring their summer pets to ARF rather than abandoning them, ARF programs increasingly addressed situations of special needs.

"PUP" stands for People United with Pets and was developed because over time, civilization has made animals dependent on humans, and some of these four-legged household members are more fortunate than others. Dogs more than cats become their steward's alter egos, often sharing their meals, their beds, loyally following them around like shadows.

Some canine companions even begin to look like their humans, and when their best friend becomes ill or dies, these silent four-legged children pine, and a major part of them dies. This is when a pet needs a loving foster parent more than ever, and because of this, ARF founded a program in 1996 to care for the pets of victims of domestic abuse as well as for pets of people afflicted with a terminal illness. People suffering from AIDS, cancer, Alzheimer's, diabetes, Lyme's disease, Chronic Fatigue Syndrome, Parkinson's and many other debilitating illnesses find it increasingly difficult to function in a competitive society. Many lose their source of income and medical expenses deplete their savings. The personal challenges they are faced with each day can be overwhelming, and the emotional stress they bear in the realization that they may be leaving behind an orphaned pet can add an additional dimension to the pain their illness has already caused them. The love of an affectionate pet is comforting to people who are ill and "PUP" makes provisions for caring volunteers to help terminally ill or incapacitated patients to keep their pet at home with them. With this in mind, ARF's Executive Director, Sara Davison recently organized a partnership between ARF and the East Hampton Meals on Wheels to assist homebound seniors with the care of their pets. Sometimes as people age, their pets outlive them. Sometimes a senior citizen living on a small social security check cannot afford to pay for the services of a veterinarian for their aging pet. Sometimes their physical restrictions prevent them from walking their dog and their pet falls into serious neglect. People United with Pets (PUP) offers support to people with illnesses that prevent them from giving their pets the love and care they need. In cases of financial hardship the program helps the pet receive veterinary care. During 2002, PUP brought wellness clinics to pets of families living on and off the Shinnecock Indian Reservation. That year, ninty-five dogs and cats were treated twice with free rabies shots, heartworm tests and treatment, free spaying and neutering, assistance with behavior problems, supplies and advice. PUP's outreach service to Southampton's Native American community has become an annual tradition. The PUP program came into existence on January 1st, 1996 as an offshoot of ARF (Animal Rescue Fund). PUP is volunteer operated and works though its own separate funding and guide rules.

"Feeding Station"

The services PUP offers include: caring for animals in their homes; feeding and walking pets; providing transportation to a veterinarian; subsidizing vet care and pet food, if necessary; litter box cleaning; caring for birds, fish and other small animals; boarding/fostering animals on an emergency basis; assisting owners in identifying appropriate placement of orphaned pets.

PUP is one of only six such organizations in the entire state of New York. It depends on the generosity of animal lovers and the services of volunteers in the South Fork community. Volunteers are always needed; especially those who can provide temporary foster homes for abused or orphaned pets.

"OP CAT" stands for Operation Cat and was created in 1997 by ARF Board Member Zoe Kamitses who organized this volunteer-driven program. OP CAT addresses the feral cat population on the South Fork. It is widely known that feral cats live short, painful–lives sometimes giving birth to kittens in wells or other precarious places. Kittens often fall prey to unfriendly dogs, freeze or starve to death or barely just survive so that they can continue the tragic cycle of feral raw existence. During winter months cats sometimes crawl into the warmth of a car's motor and face the cruelest of deaths when a driver turns on the ignition without banging on the hood of the car to warn the cat to escape. The horrors of feral existence are many and the solution is clearbirth control. Hundreds of Operation Cat volunteers trapped spayed/neutered and released more than 5,000 feral cats since 1997. When they could take kittens to the ARF shelter for care and socialization they did and these kittens were adopted into loving homes. In partnership with Bide-A-Wee Home Association, Inc. ARF volunteers tend to 700 feline colonies throughout Southampton and East Hampton. The successful downsizing of the feral cat population is largely due to the help of local veterinarians who offer their services at a discount. Operation Cat receives funding from ARF members, the Herman Goldman Foundation, the Krumholz Foundation and the Towns of Southampton and East Hampton. When the City Council of Palm Beach, Florida learned of the enormous success of the OP CAT program it invited Sara Davison, ARF's Executive Director to help with the overwhelming feral cat population of Palm Beach. After Ms. Davison explained OP CAT's process the Town made a resolution to spend $50,000 on a similar program. No doubt Ms. Davison's advice saved the feral cat population of Palm Beach from impending euthanasia.

Tax-deductible donations can be made to: ARF, Box 901, Wainscott, NY 11975. If you are interested in volunteering for OP CAT, please call Zoe Kamitses at: 631-283-9479. For assistance or further information call: (631) 537-0400.

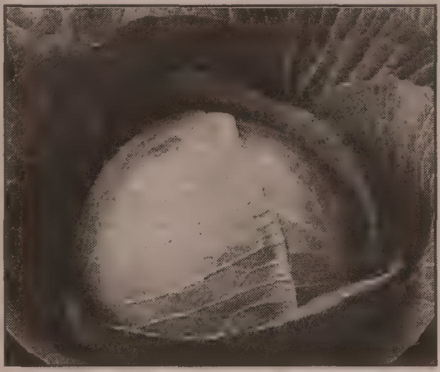
HOMEGROWN WITH BRIAN HALWEIL

STOCKING THE LARDER

The largest food preservation operation on the East End just might be at the Ross School. And Beth Collins, a sous chef and the person in charge of purchasing food for East Hampton's Ross School, shows me why.

She leads me through a spotless, brightly-lit corridor into the school's kitchen where a team of expert chefs, culinary interns, and dishwashers are making sure that the students will be well fed this winter.



"Everything that we process goes through here," Collins says. She points out a crate of blushing Roma tomatoes, the last of the 4000 pound tomato crop that Quail Hill Farm in Amagansett harvested for the school. "We've been freezing these tomatoes since the last two weeks of August," Collins says, "sometimes dealing with as much as 680 pounds at a time."

Most school cafeterias in this country aren't equipped to put up two tons of tomatoes for the winter menu. But the Ross School, which prepares 1300 meals a day for both the students and staff as well as the Bridgehampton Day School, has elevated school cafeteria fare to a sophisticated and very palatable level. It uses produce grown primarily on Long Island on farms like Quail Hill, Water Mill's Green Thumb, and Jamesport's Golden Earthworm (the school favors organically grown produce.)

"Regional, Organic, Seasonal, Sustainable," is how Ross' pioneering executive chef Cooper explains the philosophy for school cuisine. This results in staff, students, and any lucky visitors giving the impeccably fresh and varied dishes rave reviews. On a recent day in late September. the menu consisted of sautéed Broccoli Raab, Spaghetti Squash, Rice, an Eggplant, Tomato and Olive Caponata, Peanut Butter Noodles, Braised Tofu, Scallops and Orrechiette, Brick-oven Pizza, Cauliflower and Potato Chapattis with Rita, Miso Soup, Assorted Salads, a Sandwich Bar, and Bread Pudding.

Needless to say, this is not some home canning operation. In fact, the Ross School doesn't can. It mainly dries and freezes. The government requires an extra set of standards to can on premises. Executive chef Cooper finds freezing generally preserves more nutrients and flavor than the intense cooking involved with canning.

According to Collins' records, the frozen food cache will contain the following: 400 pounds of peppers, 37 pounds of eggplant puree, 200 hundred pounds of corn, 80 quarts of corn stock, a couple of dozen pounds of edamame, (yes, soybeans show up in the cafeteria), five pounds of basil, 200 hundred pounds of squash, (frozen halved squash becomes rubbery upon defrosting, slicing works better), 260 pounds of asparagus, 250 pounds of blackberry, 140 pounds of strawberries, 250 pounds of raspberries, 325 pounds of blueberries, 150 pounds of peaches, 70 pounds of nectarines, and six quarts of nectarine water, along with an unspecified quantity of peas and string beans.

The Ross crew slices and dries about 360 pounds of Beefsteak tomatoes. They place about 300 pounds of whole Beefsteaks on trays, freeze them and then store them in large plastic bags. They've dried cherry tomatoes which are deemed "very good," by Collins. Thousands of plum tomatoes are cooked in a tilt-skillet that holds 200 pounds, then passed through a mouli, cooled in a blast chiller, and frozen in 18-quart bins.

Collins leads me into a deep freezer so cold that it froze the ink in my ballpoint pen. The temperature

Looking for Firewood?
Look for ALB.

As winter approaches, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Asian Longhorned Beetle Cooperative Eradication Project will continue to perform tree surveys. During this period, USDA officials would like to remind everyone purchasing firewood or moving wood products in and around quarantine areas to be aware of the dangers of transporting the highly destructive Asian longhorned beetle (ALB).

White, wormlike ALB larvae live deep in the heartwood of trees, and transporting them to areas not currently infested would prove devastating.

If you have questions concerning the movement of firewood, or have spotted an adult ALB or ALB larvae, please call 1–877–STOPALB or 1–866–265–0301.

gage reads minus 14 degrees Fahrenheit.

With so much food riding on electronic freezers, I wonder if power-outs are a concern? As it turns out, the school has generators on site, which kicked on during the August 14 blackout.

"We store the root crops from the last possible harvest," Collins explains. "Root veggies are very practical," she continues, "You don't have to freeze or touch them until you are ready to use them."

The school plans to store 400 pounds of beets, nearly 2000 pounds of carrots, 200 pounds of green cabbage, and 100 pounds of the red, 600 pounds of celery root, 260 pounds of Chinese rose radish, 325 pounds of rutabaga, and 400 pounds of turnips.

The work is labor-intensive but worth it. Most schools deal only with prepackaged, processed foods that are reheated, fried, or simply unwrapped before serving.

"In summer, when we're doing berries, it's not as tough," Collins exclaims. "But around the end of September, it really becomes time consuming."

"When a farmer calls and says their long awaited organic sweet corn is ready to harvest on a Tuesday morning in September, then Tuesday it is," Collins notes. Eight hours later, the Ross School has 160 pounds of corn kernels in the freezer.

The work seems justified in the dark of winter when the food still bursts with flavor and color from months past. "Last March, we served corn, frozen from last fall's harvest," said line chef Franco Denaro, "It was perfect, like it was just picked off the cob."

Local farmers are very responsive, particularly in a year when a late harvest means farms are flush with produce after tourist flows have trailed off. Ross often contracts with growers at the beginning of the season and consistently purchases large quantities of produce.

Still, Collins regrets that more schools aren't equipped to replicate the model and says that the lack of local food processing operations is a major obstacle. "In farming regions, local processing would really change the equation of how local food is used."

It sounds like a good idea. In fact, there is a group of Sag Harbor residents who are proposing to convert a food business into a community kitchen that could be used by farmers and food entrepreneurs to turn the surplus harvest into chutneys, jams, soups, pies, and other items, which could be sold on site at a healthy café, and also marketed wholesale.

You can get a taste of the Ross School's seasonal cuisine at their annual Harvest Fest on Saturday, October 25. It's free and open to the public. Call 631-907-5555 for more information.

More daring individuals might be inspired to fill their own pantries, cold cellars, meat lockers, and upright freezers. Talk to your local farmer. He or she might be happy to sell you a peck of cucumbers for pickling, a bushel of tomatoes for jarring, or some corn for freezing. Ask about seconds or blemished produce at a discounted rate. And here's a recipe from the folks at Ross in case you're cooking for yourself and one thousand guests:

Red Curry Corn Pudding

6 ears Corn 1 cup Onion small dice 2 T Oil 2 T Red Curry paste 1 can Coconut milk 1 cup heavy cream 6 Eggs 1/2 cup Cilantro leaves chopped Salt to taste

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Cut corn off the cob. With the back of a knife scrape the cobs into a bowl to extract the milk and pulp and reserve.

On low heat cook the onion until soft but not with color. Add curry paste and cook 2 minutes. Add corn kernels and cook briefly. Cool mixture.

Puree half the corn mixture and then mix back in with the other half, add the reserved cob scraping liquid and set aside.

Beat eggs light and combine with cream, coconut milk, salt and cilantro. Add corn mixture and blend well. Pour into a nine-by-nine inch baking dish.

Take a pan that's large enough for the baking dish to rest in and place a wet kitchen towel in the bottom of the larger pan. Place the baking dish inside the pan and pour hot water into the outside pan so it is filled an inch from the bottom. Cook in water bath until center is just set.

Event Planners Get Bright About Lights

Forget about flowers. Stop fussing over linens, and quit fretting about seating. As important as those elements are to the success of an event, more planners are focusing on lighting as a vital tool for creating the appropriate atmosphere.

"It's important for a room to set the right tone," said Joan Horton, Revlon's vice president of corporate events, at a recent BiZBash conference panel.

Proper lightning is not about flooding a room with amber light. It is about creating effects that can sustain a mood and sculpt an environment. Lighting is as fundamental to décor as props and furniture. Technicians can use moving projections to wash color and patterns throughout space to highlight a venue's architecture or conceal blemishes.

"You can shove as many flowers in a room as possible, but in the end you've got a room with flowers," says Bentley Meeker, one of New York's leading lighting designers. "If you want to create a spectacular environment, the best way to do that is with lighting."

As many event professionals grapple with modest budgets, the flexibility of lighting provides an affordable alternative for planners to build a memorable atmosphere without breaking the bank. A typical lighting budget may range from $3,000 for some pinspots, which are delicate beams that create visual centerpieces and a haze to warm a whole room, to $35,000 or more for a sophisticated display, such as a patterned wash over a dance floor. Another alternative is gobo lights, which project images on walls and ceilings, or even light up an entranceway.

Courtesy of BiZBash Media

In addition to being affordable, lighting allows for last-minute adjustments. Through the magic of contours and color, all it takes is a change of gel to transform a space from bland to fantastic. Brian Winthrop, president of the production company Big Wave International adds that "You can make two or three different settings at the same event just by using lighting design." Technicians can project a bright sky filled with billowy clouds that morphs into a cosmic, starry night by the end of dinner to encourage dancing.

Today there are "intelligent lighting systems" that are controlled remotely by computers. The size of the equipment as well as the cost is remarkably small for the impact delivered. There are also LED screens, battery-operated fixtures and advanced color mixing units available to create new atmospheres, as well.

When working with a lighting designer or technician, it is best to ask questions and use as many adjectives as possible to describe the look and feel of what you want to achieve. Think about whether you want the space to be bold or subdued. Should the event be bright and funky or serene and inviting?

No matter what your event, the right lighting will succeed in flattering both your guests and the venue.

Police Blotter

As the sun rose over Sunset Cove in East Hampton last Sunday, thieves went to work on an unnamed boat. The owner of a 25 foot Bertram docked at Sunset Cove Marina called police when he discovered that someone had kicked in the cabin door and made off with his $600 GPS setup. The smashed door will cost him $250 to replace.

Apparently, a contractor working at a house on Horsemeadow Lane in East Hampton misunderstood the homeowner when he requested the use of steal cable in its construction. Police were called when the homeowner realized his IO Digital Cable box was missing. He told police he only knew of a few people who were in the residence at the time and that he wanted the incident on record.

A local school's art gallery was the site of a theft last Thursday. According to police and the organizer of the public showing, sometime during the show someone made off with a $700 painting titled Anne Frank. In the world art dealing, thefts of this caliber are common; the piece will probably be hidden in someone's attic for the next few months.

A 1988 BMW was stolen from an Amagansett service station last week. The owner of the station told police on Friday that neither he nor the car's owner gave anyone permission to drive the $5,000 automobile while it was parked there the preceding week.

Employees of the Southampton Publick House called police last week when two brothers, both 23 from Southampton, refused to leave. Police arrested the pair for disorderly conduct when they began fighting with Publick House staff.

A 37-year-old Port Jefferson man was apparently frustrated with some spoiled college kids when he ripped the spoiler off a vehicle at Southampton College. Town Police charged him with criminal mischief in the third degree.

The Fastest Stapler in the East is out on parol and back to his usual routine. Police arrested the 23-year-old Southampton man last Tuesday after he was seen stapling the sidewall of a tire and driving off. The victim told nearby police officers who tracked him down and held him until he could be identified.

Oh, the irony. A Mount Sinai man was arrested by Coast Guard Officials a mile offshore last week as they responded to his distress call. According to Southampton Town Police, the man radioed the Coast Guard for assistance who arrived expecting a routine situation. When a Coast Guard Official asked if there were any weapons on-board, the man produced a fully automatic Norinco 7.62mm gun. He was escorted back to shore where police charged him with criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree.

Dan's Letters

AMBUSHED

Dear Dan,

If there's one thing I know about, it's being ambushed.

Thirty-three years ago I was a pointman in the K-9 Corps in Vietnam. For those who aren't familiar with military language, I was walking out in front of a company of approximately one hundred and twenty men with a German Shephard. My mission was to provide early silent warning of energy presence, including ambushes, booby traps and snipers.

I spent six months training to detect and avoid ambushes. An ambush is the act of lying concealed so as to attack by surprise.

Heaven knows, I saw my share of ambushes, but because of my training and the keen senses of my dog, I and the rest of my men survived unscathed.

If that all of us have been ambushed in a way much more in situations then I was in Vietnam.

Think of the premises upon which this country sent its young men and women off to war is highly questionable. We were told by our commandeer in chief that Sadam Husan tried to purchase xxxx fromNiger, that Sadam Husan had direct ties to Osama bin laden and to Al Kada and that Sadam Husan hid and was going to use and sell weapons of mass destruction.

Other wars that the United States became involved in were started for clear-cut reasons. The reason that our country started a war with Iraq don't cut it!

STILL WINNING BY A HARE

Dear Dan,

Juvenile migrant sea turtles from as far away as Mexico visit and feed in the waters of Peconic Bay from July through November. These endangered species are currently under study not only to assess their own ecological health, but also as "sentinel species" for what they can tell us about the waters that affect our own health as well.

Wildlife Trust's NY Bioscape Initiative Peconic Bay Sea Turtle Ecology and Health Assessment, based in Riverhead, is now in its second year of study.

Please find the story at: http://www.wpti.org/fnsep03.htm or on the Field News page of our website, www.wildlifetrust.org.

FOUL BALL

Dear Dan,

It is nice that fall is here and we all have more time available. I almost wrote to you in August about your Spanish-American War business and "Joe Bouvier" but didn't have the time.

Most of baseball – the records are, of course history – and we know about you and history.

So, we came to the Boston Red Sox and Babe Ruth (see your 9/26/03 article).

The last time the Red Sox won the World Series was 1918, defeating the Chicago Cubs. In 1918 Ruth was twenty-three years old (he was born in 1895). His pitching record was 13 and 7 (Walter Johnson won 23) – his batting average was .300 (Ty Cobb hit .382) and Ruth hit eleven home runs. In the World Series Ruth was one for five as a hitter and had a 2-0 record as a pitcher.

In 1919 Ruth was still with Boston and after that season was sold to the Yankee for $125,000 and a loan of $300,000.

Most people know what followed – starting in 1920 with the Yankees, Ruth led the league in home runs ten times and was the batting leader once. The Yankees won seven pennants and four World Series.

I was able to put this information together in less than an hour without a computer.

Now, maybe you'll print this correct baseball history (plus an editorial comment) and your readers will have the facts.

Enjoy the post season.

Larry Stevens
East Hampton

I stand corrected. Ruth wasn't the best yet, but he was pretty good by 1918. –D.R.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Microdermabrasion: Crystal Clear Skin

If, like our fall leaves, your skin is feeling a bit dry and worse for summer wear, then it's time to rejuvenate, hydrate, exfoliate and celebrate the new beauty suggestions we have for you to wipe away the effects of sun, sand and sea and get ready for the wind and rain to come.

In the summer months, our faces really take a beating while we enjoy the beautiful outdoors of the Hamptons, but now is the time to turn over a new leaf, to shed the residues of those hazy summer days. And shedding is exactly what we mean! Fall is the perfect season to regroup and get ready for winter by getting rid of old damaged summer skin.

Microdermabrasion is one way to reveal a fresher, beautiful, more rejuvenated you. And with the holidays just around the corner, it's something to consider. But what is Microdermabrasion? Well, we've got the dead skinny for you.

Microdermabrasion is a technique that uses a machine containing tiny crystals that literally blast away dead, environmentally-damaged skin. The crystals exfoliate and resurface your face and neck as a technician gently works them in small areas across your whole face, leaving it feeling and looking brighter and refreshed.

It's a series of treatments that take about 30 minutes and is "so popular, and non-invasive, that many are booking sessions during their lunch hours," report Eileen Palley and Astrid Bedrossian from the Georgette Klinger salon of New York, who have their own version of microdermabrasion. Instead of crystals, they actually use diamonds to resurface the skin, which they say are much gentler. Well, diamonds are a girl's best friend.

The ladies from Georgette Klinger say that in summer our skin tends to harden and thicken, and that microdermabrasion removes the toughened layer, allowing fresh new skin to shine through. Microdermabrasion can also help to polish and reduce fine lines and wrinkles, help with mild scars and acne, as well as mild pigment irregularities.

But if you've worked on your sun tan all summer and the thought of shedding a layer of it isn't quite so appealing, don't worry, apparently this treatment only enhances often gray-yellowish, worn tans. So, is there a down side to this beauty favorite? Most say no, but in some cases, women have reported a couple of days of slightly red, marginally irritated skin. Though the general consensus is that this is a minor negative for major results.

If, however, you'd like a more natural alternative to lift your spirits and your face this fall, then you might want to try something like Fresh Sugar Face Polish Mask. Suzette Pilgrim, a make-up artist from Fresh told us that this would be the best alternative to microdermabrasion. Fresh's Sugar Face Polish Mask hydrates, deep cleans and evens out the face and neck. It's a ten-minute treatment that should be done three times a week. But you can do this one in the comfort of your own home. Fresh is renowned for using unusual but familiar ingredients, combining ancient recipes with modern technology. This product is no exception. This face-mask contains brown sugar that works as a humectant and is anti bacterial. Added to this, there is strawberry puree, which infuses the skin with vitamin C, and helps to shed layers of dead skin with the acid, revealing revitalized skin beneath. This allows grape seed oils to work on hydrating. Fresh's representative assured us that the face-mask works wonders. You be the judge. But if all else fails, those strawberries, sugar and grape oil sound, and believe me, smell, almost good enough to eat.

Whether you go for the fruity approach to skin care this fall, or feel like glamming it up a bit with crystal and diamonds, one thing's for sure. The seasons are gonna' keep on changing. So go with the flow and shed a little skin.
